Christmas Tree Industry

Large Shipments Being Made

Christmas trees in carload lots are being shipped from this section by the Mesue Lumber Co. Six cars have been sent out of South Paris, with a total of [illegible] trees; two cars from Bryant Pond with approximately 3,400 trees; four cars from Auburn with 6,800; Livermore Falls and Hebron three cars [illegible]. A truck service to New York City has transported several thousand more, number not known. Farmers in this section of Maine have received pay for more than 25,500 scrub fir and spruce cut largely in pastures and on waste land. Work has been done solely by local help in the towns.

New York and cities west absorb spruce while Boston and the east purchase fir.

Community Christmas

Donations Needed to Fill the Calls for Assistance

The committee in charge of Community Christmas work is anxious that all donations of clothing, foot wear and bedding shall be at the basement of Swett's Shoe Store by Friday night. Donations for the Christmas baskets may be left any time before December 22nd.

There are many calls for assistance and the committee can find a place for any useful article. Donations of money should be sent to Mrs. Minola Aldrich.

Newkirk's Visit To Norway

Returned To Boston After Stay At Tavern—Calls At Dentist, Weary Club and Antique Shop

Boston, Mass., Dec. 9, 1933.

Mr. Fred Sanborn,
Publisher The Advertiser,
Norway, Maine.

Dear Fred: Well, my wife and I reached home O. K. last night after our stay in Norway at Beals Tavern. Not much ice after we left Norway. Had better luck than on the up trip when the car skidded into another auto on Danforth Street, going into Portland, and ripped the right rear fender loose from the running board and crumpled it against the wheel. I cussed while my wife held her fingers in her ears. However, we limped into Norway and next day I took the car to Merton Millett over South Paris way. You know he's "The Man Who Takes the "dent" out of Accident." I had quite an argument with Merton when I went back after the car. He'd smoothed up that fender until I claimed the car wasn't mine, but it had my number plates on it, so I guess Merton was right. Merton can take the dents out of cars all right. If he could do the same thing with pocketbooks these days, he wouldn't have time to eat or sleep.

When we got home last night and I read my Advertiser, I was a good deal disappointed not to find my name in the paper. Of course, when I first met you in the village I told you not to put my name in the paper, but I didn't think you'd take me at my word, Fred. I just wanted to appear modest, that was all.

I used to run a paper out in Ohio—I ran it up the spout and then into the ground. It was a weekly paper—it was a very weakly paper, Fred. But what I'm getting at is that when my subscribers would tell me things about themselves, they'd always add, "Don't say anything about it in the paper," but I knew they wanted it in all the time. If I hadn't put their names in the paper, they'd have been insulted. Well, I thought you was like that, Fred, but instead of putting my name in, you did just what I asked you to. Next time I ask you not to put my name in the paper, don't pay any attention to what I say.

Newkirks Visit the Dentist

As I explained to you, my wife and I drove up to Norway to have Dr. Easton do some dental work for us. Norway is lucky to have a dentist who can pull cus-

T. P. C. CLUB

Officers Elected for Coming Year

The Tigredia Past Chiefs' Club of Lake Temple Pythian Sisters met Saturday evening at Pythian Hall. A social hour was enjoyed before supper, which was served at 6:30.

The business meeting followed and opened with repeating the Club Collect. Officers for the year were elected as follows:

President—Mrs. Mary Kimball.
Vice Pres.—Mrs. Emma Holden.
Secretary—Miss Jessie Everett.
Treasurer—Mrs. Mary Lewis.

It was voted to make a contribution to Community Christmas. The mystery box went to Miss Clara Schnuer.

The program following was "The Family Album," by Mrs. Mamie Twitchell. A large Christmas tree, gaily decorated, and filled with gifts, was unloaded by Mrs. Avis Huff and Miss Jessie Everett and everyone received a gift, and many a joker. A Beano game closed the evening's entertainment.

UNIVERSALIST SALE, SUPPER AND SHOW

Continued Through Thursday Night

The ladies of the Universalist Church are holding their annual Christmas sale in the church vestry and results are gratifying.

The sale opened Thursday afternoon at 2:30, with tables loaded with percale aprons, candy, especially delicious fudge; home baked food, fancy articles, used books and miscellaneous articles. Two pirates, Mrs. George Lapoint and Annis Hadley, conducted a buried treasure business at the mystery booth. Mrs. Retta Jackson, Mrs. Nellie M. Curtis and Mrs. Inez Hills sold the food; aprons were sold by Mrs. Honor Downing, Mrs. Abbie Heath and Mrs. Nellie Merrill; candy was passed out by Mrs. Nora Harlow and Mrs. Evelyn Hascall, and fancy work, quilt and books by Mrs. June Hutchins, Mrs. Mae Hutchins and Mrs. Harriet Waite. Refreshments and a cafeteria supper were in charge of Mrs. Inez Wiltsie. The sale continued through the evening.

Christmas decorations of fir trees and garlands of green were aided in the holiday effects by streamers of red crepe paper and red berries.

This Thursday night a supper will be served at 6:30 with meat loaf featured. After that will be presented a three-act comedy drama, "Bright and Early" coached by Rev. George Lapoint. Those appearing in the play are: Ralph Stiles, Earl Pierce, Steven Russell, Mrs. Phoebe Bailey, Ernestine Hutchins, Margaret Crooker, Adeline Emerson, Donald Partridge, Jr., Marian Downing, Mrs. Roger Gates and Charles Stiles.

CAR TURNED OVER

Ralph S. Osgood spent Sunday with his sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Chester C. Russell, and his mother, Mrs. C. E. Osgood at Farmington, N. H. Mrs. Osgood returned with him and will spend the winter here.

On their way home, while coming through Hollis Center, the car slewed on an icy hill in turning out for a car, and tipped over. Fortunately the car did not come in contact with the on-coming car and no one was hurt in the spill. The car was badly damaged.

H. B. Young is wiring the B. E. Cole Co. office.

Walter Ridlon of Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ridlon of Auburn, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Paragard and Mrs. Minnie Stowe of Lynn, Mass. were in town, Monday to attend the funeral of Charles L. Ridlon.

Men's Bible Class Notes

Meetings Will Be Resumed Next Sunday

The Twin Town Men's Bible Class will resume meetings Sunday, Dec. 17, 2:30 p. m., at Odd Fellows' dining hall, South Paris. Wesley Hammond will be the leader. Music will be furnished by an orchestra and familiar hymns will be sung.

The question about making two divisions of the class will be considered. A number believe a plan of this kind will work out for the convenience of many in both towns and possibly draw out a larger attendance.

Norway people not having transportation on Sunday may be at Clark's around 2 p. m. and cars will be furnished.

Between twenty-five and thirty men attended the get-together of the Twin Town Mens' Bible Class at American Legion Hall, Friday evening. This small number was due to conflicting engagements in both towns.

The Norway Troop Boy Scouts served a fine banquet under the supervision of Ernest Moores, the Scout Master. Prof. Gerald Cushing of Hebron Academy was the speaker and left with men advice and inspiration well worth considering seriously.

GETS ARM BROKEN

Charles Russell had the misfortune to break his left arm, Saturday. The accident was caused by a limb breaking on a tree which he climbed.

DAUGHTERS' CHILDREN'S NIGHT

An invitation was extended for the Daughters to unite with the Sons and Auxiliary for the Christmas observance when Children's Night will be observed. A committee composed of Mrs. Fannie Frost, Mrs. Mabelle Bell, Mrs. Josephine Swan, Mrs. Avis Huff, Mrs. Edna Corey, Mrs. Fannie Monk and Mrs. Gladys Noyes to meet with committees from the other two organizations, and decide the date and further plans. The mystery box went to Mrs. Helen Hunt.

BRIDGTON-NORWAY ROAD DESIGNATED THROUGH WAY

Through the efforts of Representative to the Legisature, Ernest E. Ward of Harrison, who is now in Augusta, attending the special session and probably looking in on the constitutional convention, the highway from Pondicherry Square in Bridgton to Norway has been declared a "through way."

This means that official stop signs will be erected at all important intersections and that all cars entering this through way from said intersection will be obliged to come to a full stop. This road is now one of the best tarred surface roads in this section of the state and is going to bear a good deal of traffic during the summer months. There have been one or two bad accidents at these intersections in years past and the law bearing on stop signs will be rigidly enforced.

HEYWOOD CLUB

Two All Day Meetings

The Heywood Club held its postponed meeting at the home of Mrs. Verna Millett, Millettville, with good attendance. The work of the forenoon was devoted to the quilt, which will be disposed of at the coming fair. Lunch was served at noon. In the afternoon, there was a business meeting and plans made for the dance Wednesday night, the 13th. Mrs. Muriel Millett, Mrs. Florence Noble and Miss Dorothy Millett were in charge of the dance.

On December 20, another all day meeting will be held with Mrs. Adalade and Mrs. Lillian Young, Crockett Ridge. The meeting is called at 10:30. Election of officers will take place in the forenoon and in the afternoon will be the annual Christmas tree. Mrs. Cherrie Frechette and Mrs. Blanche Noble are in charge. Each member will carry gifts for as many as they invite, the price not to exceed what was specified at the meeting. By so doing, no one will be overlooked. The club sent a sunshine box to Mrs. Eva Jackson, who is improving from her recent illness. A program will be arranged by the children.

REBEKAH LODGE NEWS

A regular meeting of Mt. Hope Rebekah Lodge will be held on Friday evening. Following the business session children's night will be observed. There will be an interesting program and a tree for the children.

At the last regular meeting there was a report of the Thanksgiving boxes. After the meeting a guessing contest was held followed by a box lunch.

Gladys King of Providence, R. I. who is visiting with relatives in Auburn has been spending a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Partridge, Wednesday she was a dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Donald B Partrdge and family.

Mrs. Alice M. Young returned Sunday to her home on Fair Street after an absence of nearly three months, which she has been spending with her two daughters, Mrs. J. Edmond Allard and Mrs. Cesare J. Trusiani of Brunswick, who have both had sickness in their homes.

Tax Money

Amount collected for the week ending Wednesday noon was $3,229.40, making a grand total of $74,214.23.

Tax payers may take advantage of the interest voted at the special town meeting and pay any amount on account in anticipation of the 1934 assessment. Interest rate is one-half of one percent per month, equivalent to per cent per annum.

Last year's taxes remaining unpaid are being rapidly reduced. On January 1, there remained $6,283.00 poll and personal uncollected. The town took over $2,351.00, leaving $3,932.00 for collection. This amount has been reduced to $1,100.

MRS. EVELYN F. MASURY

Mrs. Evelyn Fellows Masury, 81 years, widow of Capt. Charles H. Masury of Danvers, Mass., a well known summer visitor at Lake Pennesseewassee, died at her home in Danvers, December 11th. She had been ill for three months and in a critical condition the past few weeks.

She was prominent in patriotic societies, the Danver's Woman's Club, Essex County Historical Society and the Woman's Republican Club of Essex County.

Her husband, a leading leather manufacturer at Peabody, Mass. died five years ago. Her son, Col. Alfred F. Masury met death when the dirigible Akron, plunged into the sea off the New Jersey coast. Both were annual visitors at Bass Island, Lake Pennesseewassee for many seasons.

CHARLES F. RIDLON

Suddenly stricken with heart trouble while eating supper, Charles F. Ridlon, 68, passed away at his home Friday, Dec. 8, about 7 o'clock. He had returned from his work at the Jackson-Greenlaw Co., and appeared in good health. His death came as a shock, not only to his wife, but to many on the street who conversed with him on the way home after store hours.

The deceased was born Sept. 12, 1865, at Albion, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Ridlon. In 1883, he came from Turner to Norway for employment to secure money for a course at Westbrook Academy, so-called. His first job was in the Horne tannery, then he had a short engagement as printer's devil on the Norway Advertiser, with Drake & Sanborn, and entered the general store of Edwin W. Howe, as clerk. A partnership was formed in 1888 under the name of Howe & Ridlon, which remained on the sign long after Mr. Howe passed away. When Mr. Ridlon secured full control, he carried on the extensive grocery business under his own name and had the most prominent grocery store in town.

He retired from the business on Main Street in 1932, and, with his wife, conducted a small general store at his home on Oak Avenue. The past few months he was clerk at the Jackson-Greenlaw Co. market.

The deceased was a member of the Universalist Church, past master of Oxford Lodge of Masons, past high priest of Oxford Chapter, past illustrious master of Oxford Council and venerable patriarch of Oxford Ark Mariners No. 1. He was a Shriner and a member of J. L. Chamberlan Camp, Sons of Union Veterans.

He married Etta C. Clough of Cornish October 16, 1886, who survives him. He leaves a brother, Walter Ridlon, of Greene and a sister, Mrs. Inez Sennett of Turner.

The funeral at the home, Monday, at 2 p. m., was conducted by Rev. George Lepoint of the Universalist Church. Bearers were Henry B. Foster, Stephen B. Cummings, Frank Beck and Ernest B. Jackson. The body was placed in the receiving tomb at Norway Pine Grove cemetery. Stores in town were closed during the funeral hour.

Mrs. Laurence H. Denison, who has been at Hebron Sanitarium for nearly four years and her daughter, Jean, who has been there some over two, were discharged Saturday. They have gone to the home of Mrs. Herbert R. Denison, Harrison, for the present.

High School

Home Economics News

Many Home Economics girls visited a demonstration at the Central Maine Power Company Show Room. The particular points of interest were the electric beater and electric casserole. The electric casserole or bean pot was especially interesting from the standpoint of economy. This appliance runs for a day on one Kilowatt hour which, at the most, would be only ten cents and on a power rate only three cents. The older girls were much enthused over the new Hotpoint Electric Stove which has an economy cooker built in and sliding over grates which cannot tip up when pulled forward.

A very small representation from the Freshman-Sophomore class met for our evening meeting last week, due to rehearsals for so many coming events. Much progress was made by those present and we hope to have more present this week.

Agriculture

The Agriculture Classes have been working on some worthwhile projects in the shop this term. Some of the different enterprises worked upon are: Four apple tree ladders have been completed; each pupil in the Junior and Senior classes have constructed a standard box for packing a bushel of apples; one pupil has constructed a hog trough for his sum project; two other pupils have overhauled a gas engine; two pupils have constructed two all mash poultry hoppers; another pupil has made a bull staff connected with his project; several soldering exercises have been completed; under rope work the long and short splice have been made and several knots have been made; two milking stools have been constructed. The Freshman class have classified all shop tools and their operations, have constructed a bench nook and are at the present time making a drawng plan to use in constructing a nail and staple box.

Basket Ball Schedule

Norway basket ball schedule for 1933-34 is as follows:

(First Team)
Dec. 14, Norway at Falmouth
January 5, Bridgton at Norway
January 12, Norway at Gould
January 19, Paris at Norway
January 26, Gould at Norway
February 2, Norway at Bridgton
February 16, Oxford at Norway
February 23, Norway at Paris

(Second Team)
December 15, Norway at Falmouth
January 12, Norway at Gould
January 20, Norway at Andover
January 26, Gould at Norway
February 10, West Paris at Norway

Also two games with Paris and two with Lewiston, dates pending.

French Club

The French Club meeting Friday, Dec. 8, was in charge of Margaret Hill. Business was discussed in the morning and a few games played but the main part of the program was held after school. There was a Christmas tree at which joke presents were given to the members by Santa Claus. The refreshments this month were in the form of Christmas stockings which were filled with candy. There were attractive Christmas programs given to each member present. There also was a very interesting program presented, consisting of singing, readings and games.

Commercial Notes

Those maintaining the best accuracy in Miss Leeman's Sophomore typewriting class are: Millie Morse, Elizabeth Perry, Lempi Paakonen and Elizabeth Ariel.

Those in Miss Higgins' class: Gertrude Lehtola and Esther French.

Gerald Truman has been awarded the 60-word Gregg Shorthand Speed Certificate.

Dramatic Club

The Dramatic Club wishes everyone a Merry Christmas and a Happy Christmas and a Happy New Year. The organization will formally wish the faculty and entire student body the same at final assembly of the fall term which will be held last period on Friday, December 15. This greeting will be mainly in the form of a one act play, "More Blessed." This little play bears out the thought that it is more blessed to give than to receive—that we are happiest while making others happy. The cast was chosen by the new tryout plan, recently adopted by the club in accordance with its general revision program, and is as follows:

Mr. Prescott .... Jonathan Bartlett
Mrs. Prescott .... Althea Millett
Aunt Hilary .... Eleanor Roberts
Joan Prescott .... Hildreth Shaw
Robert Prescott .... Robert Frost

League Basket Ball

Season Opened Thursday Night

The league season opened in Norway, Thursday night with a tough, hard fought game on the Opera House surface. Livermore Falls, the visiting crowd defeated the Norway Paris team with a score of 29-25.

Sharp close playing was shown all the way along with the visitors on a two-point lead at the half. he third period was a tie but during the closing minutes Livermore tossed a pair of baskets from the floor and cleaned up for a spectacular finish.

The biggest crowd for an opening night witnessed the sport and let loose with perfect freedom, as in days of old.

At Wiscasset, Monday night the Norway-Paris quintette dropped one there to the tune of 19-13. Bill Ledger and Judd were high scorers for Norway-Paris, making nine of the points.

The Rumford Tigers let loose during the third period here Wednesday evening and crowded Norway-Paris out to the tune of 44-23. The battle of points went fast, making the teams nip and tuck during three periods with the large crowd of spectators bubbling over with enthusiasm. Rumford worked up a snappy rally for a climax and tossed a rapid fire of ringers for more than a safe lead. The summary:

The World's All Right

At the Grange Hall, Thursday and Friday

On next Thursday and Friday nights, the Grange of Norway will sponsor an entertainment and dance after both nights The entertainment will be the staging of the community show, "The World's All Right." This musical comedy answers the description of something different.

The scene of the entire show is laid in a radio broadcastng studio, and the radio announcer, Jimmy Waddell, is played by Clayton Murch. His sweetheart and secretary, Jane Rogers, is played by Lucy Cobb. These two young people are trying to keep a radio station from going broke. Bill collectors haunt them and talent walks out on them; nevertheless, they are determined to put over a big program in order to sell some advertising to Mr. Dinkell of Dinkell Pickles Inc. Arthur Morgan plays the part of Mr. Dinkell. Steve Bradeen plays the part of the bill collector.

The comedy lead, Joe, the office boy, is portrayed by Herbert Butler. He saves the day in the end by putting an act over the air which is a sensational success. Miss Laura Yates plays opposite Joe in the role of Gertie Green, the Vamp of New Orleans, and sings the number which is the high spot on the radio program.

Opening Number is Clever

The opening number of the show is the Children's Story Hour with Miss Laura Yates acting as the Tell-Me-a-Story Lady. She is assisted by local children. There is a special part in this number, using two groups of small children.

Sunshine Number

The first big chorus of the show is supported by the Girls' "Smile, Smile, the World's All Right," and two dancing choruses appear in special costumes doing their routines to "Whistle and Blow Your Blues Away" and "You're in Style When You're Wearing a Smile" numbers. The girls in these groups are Frances Blaquiere, Constance Young, Hilda Logan, Irene Freeman, Eleanor Roberts, Esther French, Madalyn Meader, Phyllis Hayden, Marion Chute, Caroline Frost, Margaret Sheehy, Alice Hemingway, Louise Blaquiere, Nettie Rich, Betty Hill, Marie Prince, Eleanor Aldrich, Arline Woodworth, Iva Edwards, Millie Morse, Marion Judkins, Ettamay Judkins, Elise Richardson, Lucille Frost, Isabel Pottle, Leah Richardson, Eileen Gammon, Helen Cleveland, Katharine Flanders, Jean Heald, Frances Healy, Mary Healy.

The famous studio male singing group is composed of Albert Towne, Gerry Locke, Ernest Jackson, George Bell, Franklin Towne, Elon Brown, Merle Wade, Chester Gates, Edward Brown, Grant Abbott, Harry Shaw, Harland Whitman, Bill Bailey, Bob Hosmer, Ralph Watson and Richard Dudley, give a special arrangement of quartette songs and ditties and their number proves to be a very popular one.

Norway Churches

Episcopal

3rd Sunday in Advent. Church school will meet at 2:15 p. m. Evening prayer and address at 3:00 p. m. L. M. Thorndike, lay reader, in charge.

At the close of the service, a class for confirmation instruction will meet.

All seats are free and a cordial welcome is extended to all to attend.

Universalist

The subject of Mr. Lapoint's sermon, Sunday morning, will be "The Question of Suffering."

The church school will meet at 11:10. Earle Pierce will lead the Y. P. C. U. meeting at 6 o'clock. Subject for discussion, "After Formal Education, What?"

The Christmas party for the Sunday school will be held Friday evening, Dec. 22.

The pageant, "The Christmas Legend" will be presented Sunday evening, Dec. 24, under the direction of Rev. and Mrs. George M. Lapoint.

Everything is ready for the annual supper and entertainment in connection with the annual Christmas sale, Thursday evening, Dec. 14. The three act comedy "Bright and Early" is a modern play, full of amusing incidents.

Baptist

About 225 people listened with wrapt attention to the Cowboy as he gave the first part of the story of his very eventful life. The second part of that story will be given this Thursday evening. A meeting every night this week at 7:30. Also again on Sunday night at 7:30. If you have not heard the Cowboy, make an effort and come. You'll not regret it. The men especially are interested. Invite your friends and come with them.

Bible School as usual next Sunday at 12. We have room for more boys and girls. If you have children who are not attending any Sunday school regularly, send them along, or, better still, come with them to morning service at 10:45. The pastor is giving a talk to boys and girls every Sunday morning now in the morning service, with interesting Bible questions obliging the youngsters to the Book.

We are looking for folks who want a church home, where the Gospel is preached and the word of God taught. If that's your mark, we welcome you.

CANNED GOODS FOR CHRISTMAS

The members of the Norway Farm Bureau, Women's Division, have been asked by the home office, to donate canned goods and vegetables for Christmas. It is suggested that each member give one can of something, and a contribution of vegetables. These are to be left with Mrs. Elon L. Brown, the first of the week before Christmas. Each package will be labelled as coming from the Farm Bureau. These donations will be used in the Community Christmas work.

MRS. THOMAS MUIRHEAD

Mrs. Carrie L., wife of Thomas L. Muirhead, of South Paris, died Friday, Dec. 8, at the home of her step-daughter, Mrs. George Wheeler, at Auburn. She was visiting there and had a bad spell Tuesday, and failed to rally.

Mrs. Muirhead was born in Woodstock, Feb. 13, 1868, the daughter of Judge Herrick C. and Lucy M. Davis. She resided several years in Norway and after her marriage moved just across the town lines, opposite Fair and Alpine Streets.

The deceased was an active member of Norway Methodist Church.

Besides her husband, she leaves two step-daughters, Mrs. Eugenia A. Dean of South Paris and Mrs. George Wheeler of Auburn.

Services at Spiller's Funeral Home were conducted by Rev. W. W. Lyon. Burial was at Norway Pine Grove Cemetery and the bearers were D. L. Joslin, Elmer L. Aldrich, Charles Dunn and Ransom Gould.

A Mountain Brook

Paper written by a member of the Twin Town Nature Club and read at the meeting in South Paris, Dec. 5th:

In the beginning, I am a mountain brook, but before I finish my course, I become a pasture brook and a meadow brook and such a race I run.

I am more fortunate than many brooks for the hand of man has not stripped my mountain home of all its glories, and left me with no shade so that the burning July sun can dry me to my rocky bed. Year in and year out I rush on my way, in places leisurely and quietly, in others noisily falling many feet, tumbling over rocky falls in a maddening, thundering rush and roar, glorying in the noise I make.

My course is a pleasant one and my life so happy that there is no time of year that I am not a singing brook. In half mile stretches you may walk over me without stepping from my beautiful moss-covered rocks and behold, with every step you are crushing many kinds of moss, all beautiful, some of them rare and so fashioned as to be beyond description. Hepatics and lichens are here also, and the trees that line my mossy banks are a marvel patterned with these breathing things.

I sweep down green velvet runways where I choose and bring up in a pool where trout find depth and shade to hide themselves. This spot the fisherman likes to visit and always finds I have in store for him at least one speckled treasure. Here also the king-fisher may plunge for his dinner, awakening with his clattering rattle all drowsy things.

In my life is never a dull moment when spring unlocks the ice and snow from over me I at once gather all my forces from unseen and hidden places and together with this added power tear down the mountain and out across the meadow many miles to the lake, taking with me last year's dead leaves, broken bits of branches, loose waste, dead ferns and grasses, having a grand sweep all along my banks. Now, when the new growth of shrubs, plants, ferns and flowers are ready, I have a clean house for them and a well watered foundation for their roots. First comes the green leaves of the violet, white, blue and yellow, some on the bank and some on the mossy rocks in midstream. Spring weather brings the arbutus, trillium, lady's slipper, way to my very borders, also hepatica, anemone, clintonia and all the other wild flowers common to wooded land and wet brook borders, goldthread, water-cress, bitter-cress and dalibarda travel over my mossy rocks and many are the flowers that blossom there. The later flowers follow in their order, constantly changing my banks and adding new beauty.

Many orchids come within my view: the plantain, ladies' tresses, purple fringed orchid and others; while in spots the hand of man has added marsh marigold, water forget-me-nots and the cardinal flower which I have done by best to cultivate. Colt's foot and peppermint have also been added to my store.

When late summer and fall produce the berry crop, I am blessed with my share of these as well—strawberries, blueberries, raspberries and blackberries are found along my bank, while the berries from flowering plants and shrubs are a marvel in themselves. White baneberry I often see, thorn apple, choke cherry, the bright red berries of the false Solomon's seal, wild and bristly sasparilla, spikenard, partridge berry, wintergreen and bunch berry. These are only a few that Autumn brings.

The giant boulders which adorn my sides along my mountain course are topped with poly pody ferns among which often trail the running evergreens—ground cedar and running pine. At their base lie wheels of evergreen and Christmas fern. Further along I wind through acres of hay-scented fern and through rich pasture land where braken stands shoulder high. The dainty oak fern has chosen many a spot in sheltered nook by crumbling walls along my bank, and the lacy maidenhair is not unknown to me.

Birds love a brook and many do I see. Their music added to my song makes magic for all who love the fragrant woodland trails. vireos and warblers are plentiful, while fly-catchers are busy all day feeding upon the many flies and insects that hover above my surface, chickadees and nuthatches hide their over-supply of peanuts and seeds in many a shaggy yellow birch along my course.

Here you can always hear the oven bird and at twilight the veery, hermit and wood thrush, make music, wonderful beyond description; the scarlet tanager builds its nest within a stone's throw of my banks and sits, calling and singing, where his brilliant reflection looks back at him from my mirrored surface.

In passing through the meadow, I see altogether different plant and animal life. Here are many kinds of grasses and flowers. Buttercups, daisies, meadow rue, meadow sweet, Joe Pye weed, fire weed, milkweed and many other wild flowers. Now and then a muskrat shows himself, often a bittern and sometimes a blue heron. I pass through alder thickets and marshy land, the woodcock sings his love song to his mate within my hearing. The marsh hawk passes over many times in search of its prey, and a bald eagle has been within my range of vision more than once.

The picture Autumn makes along my banks is one of many colors, for where maples, birches and beeches in their autumn dresses mingle with firs, pines and spruces, it is no rare combination to the Maine-born, but always marvelously beautiful. Add to this my green fern and moss-covered banks and the reflection of autumn colors on my face and words fail.

When winter comes and with it snow and ice, I am still a thing of beauty. My rocks have changed their emerald coat for ermine and now look like huge puffballs. Where I fall many feet, you will find all things nearby hung with crystals far more beautiful than jewels, while overhanging trees and ferns are adorned as with a magic frosted pencil.

In places the deer, persued by hunters, leap across from bank to bank, scarce knowing I am there, and tracks of rabbit, fox and squirrel pass back and forth many times. So much of life, both great and small, animal and insect, goes on within and about me that it is almost beyond belief. Frogs, mosquitoes and dragon flies, snakes, spiders and lizards, great water bugs, caddis flies and beetles. All preying upon something and being destroyed in turn.

I do not boast of my power, although it is mighty, but for the most part I go unharnessed to the end. All seasons are one to me, I love them all. Each brings its own particular beauty, leaves its print and passes on, through all of them I offer drink, pure and undefiled, to quench the thirst of man and beast. For those who have eyes to see, I offer beauty unsurpassed, while he who loves the music of a brook finds forgetfulness from troublesome cares and grief, and peace to rest his weary soul.

Sent in from Oxford friends, clipped from the St. Petersburg paper:

Failing to Make Good

Editor: I wish to congratulate you on the editorial in issue of the 22d inst., headed "The School Meddlers." As a carpenter, I should say that you hit the nail on the head.

Most certainly, politicians should be barred from controling the school system in any way. A politician is working for himself first, last and all the time, regardless of the smoke-screen he puts out to obscure his personal object.

The voters who have the privilege of electing well-qualified managers of the schools often make grave mistakes in accepting the candidate's pre-election talk without further investigation. We should at least be sure that our man had (in the matter of his own education) passed and completed his elementary grades; and also had a decent smattering of the ordinary social requirements for intercourse with people of education and refinement.

The teachers have a hard row to hoe under present conditions. They may be exceptionally good, but they can't be expected to furnish brains for the dumb pupils. They should, however, be very sure that the backward pupil is really lacking in mentality—it may be a case of carelessness or indifference to his opportunities which the teacher can correct.

They should use their whole bag of tricks, if necessary, to awaken and stimulate him to make good use of his time at school. I know something about this personally. As a school boy, I, too, missed my chance to acquire a more advanced education. I don't think I was particularly dumb, but thought more of play than of the chance to make something of myself. I did not realize that I was sinning against myself and my country in not taking full advantage of my opportunities to help myself, and perhaps my country as a more desirable citizen. I was very, very foolish to waste that precious time of my life.

To illustrate by comparison: I had a classmate who did not waste his time. He graduated with honors and took a job as reporter on the Brooklyn Eagle. He advanced steadily to a position on the paper at a salary of $50,000, then transferred to the New York World. This man achieved fame and fortune. His name is Don Seitz. But I, who had the same chance, but did not improve it, have done nothing worthy of note.

I hope this confession of a schoolboy that didn't know "what it was all about" may be of interest to some boy that is not doing his best in school now, but that in the future his teacher will see a great improvement. —Chas. M. Hazen.

tomers 150 miles over the roads to fix up their teeth. The answer to that is that Doc knows his stuff. My wife always dreads going to a dentist, but you know, Fred, women are such fraidy-cats—not brave like us men are.

She said to me, "Aren't you afraid to have those two teeth pulled?" I said, "Listen, woman—I don't know the meaning of the word 'fear'." Well, I walked bravely across to Dr. Easton's office without even a falter in my step and had 'em both yanked out. When I got back to the Taven, the wife said, "You look a little pale—did it hurt?" I said, "Pooh! Listen, woman—after Dr. Easton had pulled 'em, he said, 'Mr. Newkirk, I never had a patient with the iron and steel nerves you have.' "

Well, when she went over I went along to lend her courage and she, instead of believing her husband's word as a trusting wife ought to, had to tell him I'd said that he said I had nerves of iron and steel. I stood behind her winkin' at Doc so hard that I nearly cracked my right eyelid, but he told her he never made any such statement as that. He probably forgot what he said—Doc has so many patients he can't remember everything he tells 'em.

Enjoyed Stay at Tavern

We felt right at home in Beals Tavern. Bob Seavey, Paul and Tony, kept us warm, well-fed and comfortable. And let me tell you, Fred, that Lady Seavey can bake the best apple pie that ever melted in a feller's mouth. I couldn't get enough of it. One day (between meals) as I passed through the kitchen on my way to the garage, half an apple pie was settin' on the table. There wasn't anybody around and I was just goin' to help myself, when "Dirk,' Paul's police dog, pushed the door open and came into the kitchen. When he saw me with half a pie in my hands, he growled, and so I put it back on the plate and strolled out. "Dirk" is a good police dog, but I didn't know the kitchen was on his beat.

Entertained at Wearies

I enjoyed loafin' in the Weary Club while I was in the village and meetin' all the boys and hearin' 'em swap yarns about huntin' and fishin'. I was going to tell a fish story myself that afternoon, we were all together when you up and told about a big salmon in Moosehead Lake that got mad because you offered it an artificial fly. According to your tell, it jumped out of the water, snatched your rod out of your hands with its teeth and chewed it all to pieces.

Seems to me, Fred, that when a brother angler is visitin' the Weary Club, you ought to kind of hold back on your fish stories a little mite. After you got through with that one, there wasn't any use of me tellin' my poor tame little story.

I was glad to see "Elder" Gurney at the Club. Said he'd closed up his camp on Keewaydin Lake over in Stoneham and was on his way to Boston to spend a few weeks with Fred Hale of the Boston Herald. The "Elder" was timin' his arrival in Boston on the day of Repeal and showed me four corkscrews which he had sharpened up with a file and was takin' along with him.

After the "Elder" went out, Jim True, who also has a camp on the pond near Gurney and has moved to Norway for the winter, said he wished he could find somebody who would put a new cover on a canvas boat frame he had over at his camp. "Why don't you get the 'Elder' to do it, Jim?' I asked; "he's good at that kind of a job?" "Yes," says Jim, "Elder's good, but he is slow. He's had that boat over at his camp for over a year promisin' to cover it for me, but he can't seen to get around to it." What do you s'pose Jim meant by that, Fred?

Then pretty soon Bill French, the game warden dropped into the Club. Bill nearly got me in his clutches a few years ago and I step pretty carefully when he's around ever since. I was fishin' one day on Kezar Lake, where I have a camp, when the salmon were bitin' somepin' wicked. I caught four good ones before it occurred to me that maybe I had my limit, so I stopped and went ashore.

I dumped the four fish in a short sack and carried 'em up to the North Lovell store to have Harry McKeen weigh 'em for me. Well, Harry laid 'em on the scales one at a time and their weights were: 8 pounds, 6 pounds, 4 pounds and 2 pounds, making a total of 20 pounds of salmon—and the limit is only 15!

Harry was grinnin' over my shoulder as he weighed the fish, so I turned 'round and, by golly, there stood Bill French with his hands in his pockets! I hadn't heard him come in the store.

"Looks like you had pretty good luck, Newt," says Bill. "Why-er-no-I mean, yes, they did take hold fairly well, Bill," I stuttered. "I would say so," says Bill; "twenty pounds of salmon, eh? You know that the limit is only 15 pound a day, don't you?" I gulped a few times, looked down my nose and thought pretty fast for a minute, then I said:

"Sure, I know the limit is 15 pounds, Bill, but you see it was like this: First I caught the 8 pounder, then the 4 pounder, and the third fish I landed weighed 2 pounds, that was 14 pounds, see, Bill? Now the law says that if the fish you've caught fall short of 15 pound you can catch one more and keep it, no matter how big it is. Well, the last fish I caught weighed 6 pounds, so that makes it all right, don't it, Bill?" "I s'pose I'll have to take your word for it," says Bill, but just between you and me, Fred, he acted kind of suspicious—just as if he almost doubted my word when it comes to tellin' about the fish I catch. But it was a pretty narrow escape, anyway. You've probably been in the same fix yourself, Fred, and know how I felt for a few minutes.

Selling Worm-Holes

I wanted to see Gene Andrews before I left Norway. I started to walk from the Tavern over to his antique shop one afternoon, but the sidewalks were so icy that I skidded and missed the shop by half a mile and found myself over on the South Paris road.

I didn't know but I could sell Gene some worm-holes to put into his antique furniture. Of course you know, Fred, that I manufacture post-holes as a side line to my writing business. In turning out post-holes at our factory we have a lot of cuttings and trimmings left over and we turn these into worm-holes and sell 'em to antique dealers. These worm-holes are guaranteed to age a piece of antique furniture and make it look much more antique-er in a few weeks.

Well, Fred, I haven't time to write any more now. I've got to go out and test the new beer on tap in Boston since Repeal came in. I want to find out (for some friends of mine)' how much more of a wallop the six percent beer has than the 3.2 bilge we've been kiddin' ourselves with for so long. Fraternally yours,

—Newton Newkirk.

GREENWOOD

Mrs. Nellie Cross

The many friends of Mrs. Nellie Cross widow of the late Charles Cross were grieved to hear of her death at Locke Mills, Friday, December 9th. Although in failing health for the past few years she was able to attend to her many duties up to the last minute, the end coming suddenly.

Mrs. Cross was born at Sebago, September 22, 1861, the daughter of the late Lydia West and Horace Garey, she being the youngest member of a family of four. In 1877 she married Charles Kimball Cross and to this union three children were born, William, who passed away in July of 1933, Mae, who resides in Arlington, Mass. and Annie who passed away in October of 1933.

In the passing of Mrs. Cross the community loses one of its best citizens and neighbors, she being forever ready to lend a helping hand to anyone in need. She will forever remain in the hearts of all who knew her as a woman of strong integrity, as having a jovial disposition and a keen insight in life.

Besides the daughter already mentioned she is survived by a sister, Mrs. Annie Wiggins of Sanford, four grandchildren, two great grandchildren, nieces, nephews and a host of friends for whom much sympathy is felt, this being the third death in the family within a few months.

Funeral services were held, Sunday, at two p. m. at the Union Church at Locke's Mills, conducted by Rev. L. A. Edwards of Bethel, who spoke comforting words to the bereaved ones. Burial was in the family lot on Howe Hill. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, being silent reminders of the love and esteem in which she was held.

COOPERATIVES VICTORIOUS

At the moment, the position of the farmer is mixed. On the one hand, definite progress has been made in clarifying his problem and taking steps towards its solution. On the other, farm income has failed to rise to the extent that was anticipated.

In most instances, the farm products which are having the best experience are those which are represented by strong, well established, loyally supported cooperatives. The cotton producers of the south are an excellent example of this—it is not too much to say that the future outlook for cotton is better now than for many moons past. The milk producers of New York are still another—there the cooperative, in the face of violence and sabotage, said to be largely of communistic origin, is bringing order out of chaos. The walnut growers of California also demonstrate the soundness of cooperative methods. All these groups are winning a battle against depression which was started years ago.

As a matter of fact, it is doubtful if the government's farm relief program would have much chance for success without the cooperatives. They are acting as an intermediary between the government and the producers—they are in a position to explain and to clear up problems and to settle misunderstandings. They will probably be called upon to do a large amount of necessary policing, to protect the progressive farmer against his radical fellows. And they are extensively alled upon, in an advisory capacity, whenever a change in government policy is contemplated.

Yes, the cooperatives are forging ahead—and at a faster rate than is generally realized. While rewards are appearing now—their greatest achievements are still ahead of them.

At least 44 times as much quinine as it produces is needed by the world today in the saving of lives. Twenty-six thousand tons are required for the treatment of the 650,000,000 malaria patients alone, yet the annual supply does not exceed 600 tons.

MILK IN TASTY FORMS

By Betty Barclay

"Eat plenty of fruit. Drink lots of milk," says our old family doctor time and time again—particularly to the children. Here are two unusual recipes that will be very welcome in this connection. Milk and prunes supplement each other and together make an almost perfect food.

Boston Brown Bread

1 1-2 cups prunes
1 cup sour cream
1 cup sour milk
1-2 cup sweet milk
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 1-4 teaspoons soda
1 cup corn meal
2 cups graham flour
1-2 cup molasses (light)

Boil prunes 30 minutes, drain, remove pits and cut into small pieces. Combine cream, milk, sugar, salt, molasses and soda, and mix well; add corn meal and flour, beat well, add the prunes and mix well. Pour into well greased molds, filling three-quarters full. Cover and steam for 3 hours, uncover and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 10 minutes to dry. This makes 2 medium sized loaves.

PREVENTABLE FIRES

In extremely cold weather it is a temptation to force fires in heating systems in order to keep warm. Records of the National Board of Fire Underwriters indicate that over-heated stoves cause numerous fires during winter—thoughtlessness in tending the fires, radiated heat which chars beams placed too close to hot metal, defective or soot-clogged equipment or chimneys.

All these dangers can be eliminated. When attempting to obtain maximum heat from a stove or furnace, it is important to keep close watch over the unit—do not stay away from it too long. If this is done there is little likelihood of overheating.

The second item is urgent. Make an inspection of all smoke pipes and exposed metal parts of heating units that become hot, to ascertain if wood or other burnable material is located too near. Continued proximity to the hot metal may cause fire, particularly if an extra amount of heat is generated—it happens daily. If combustible material cannot be moved to a safe distance, protect it with layers of sheet asbestos.

One more precaution: Do not place hot ashes in wooden boxes or cartons; this is like a slow fuse to gun powder. Put ashes in metal containers.

Fires take a heavy toll of life every year. Surely each of us should be willing to practice such simple precautions as these to aid the cause of safety.

No man can tell what the future may bring forth, and small opportunities are often the beginning of great enterprises.

AMERICAN GAME ASSOCIATION PUSHES DUCK STAMP BILL TO SAVE WATERFOWL

While duck hunters, conservationists, naturalists and others equally sincere are debating as to whether there are more ducks or less ducks than last year, or the year before, and so on, the American Game Association, the Izaak Walton League of America, and other organizations are working for the consumation of the first really constructive act to restore wildfowl—the Duck Stamp Bill, officials declare.

The Duck Stamp Bill, now pending before Congress, simply asks the privilege of selling duck stamps at $1. each to be affixed to State hunting licenses of those desiring to hunt waterfowl. These contributions, which, it is estimated, will amount to approximately $1,000,000 a year, are to be used in restoring the vast breeding grounds of wildfowl, creating sanctuaries along the migratory flyways, for scientific research to better their conditions, and for administration of this huge system. Not less than 75 per cent of the monies are to be used to acquire breeding grounds and refuges.

Incidentally, delightful amazement over these efforts is developing in official Washington. When everybody else it seems, is trying to develop ways of wriggling out of numerous taxes, come now the hunters of the United States, some seven million strong, humbly asking the powers that be to allow them to assess themselves or those of themselves who want to hunt waterfowl, a-dollar-a-year to aid the waterfowl! Wahington can hardly understand it.

Aside from the sentimental motives, the duck hunters obviously want to increase the supply so that it will afford more sport to more of them and insure this sport for future generations.

"Well, what's the catch, what is this going to cost the government?" one eagy official asked.

"Not one red cent!" an official of the association told him. "The bill provides for the payment of all expenses out of the proceeds."

"Mister, you sportsmen are unique," he said in amazement, "you can count on my help."

In the meantime other officials of the Association are trying to determine, as accurately as is humanly possible, the exact status of the wildfowl. Most species have decreased in the last few years, but to what extent none seems to know. In any event, officials said, the sportsmen must do everything possible to aid the waterfowl to increase their numbers.

When Bankers Felt Their Responsibility

O. P. Perley of Harrison Helps Build Town in the West

In 1878, O. P. Perley of Harrison went to Lincoln, Nebraska and for a time bought and sold cattle. Feeling the urge to have a part in the building up of a town farther west in the state, he moved to Broken Bow. There he had a ranch and more cattle. Then a large general store and sold a lot of MacCormack farm machinery.

After being there a short time, he made the acquaintance of an H. G. Rogers from Vermont. They soon decided it was necessary to have a bank, and that they would be the ones to start it. They rode all night on horse back to Lincoln; made application for and received their charter.

Within two hours after receiving their papers, two other men came in and applied for the same privelege. They rode back to Broken Bow (there were no railroads then) got their building and started in. Mr. Perley was cashier. They prospered for several years, but close application to work brought on poor health for our friend from Maine. His doctor told him he would have to get out of doors again or take a rest in the plot of ground on the little hill back of town. He took up his cattle business again, and everything seemed to go well until the panic came on in 1888. He then found the man who had taken his place in the bank, had lent money right and left on security that was no good. The depositors were calling earnestly for their money.

There wasn't nearly enough money on hand to satisfy them. He and Mr. Rogers appealed to the stockholders and directors. They stood back with arms folded and would do nothing at all.

Mr. P. said, "What shall we do?" Mr. Rogers replied, "What do you think we ought to do?" Mr. P. answered, "I always have paid my bills and I hate to flunk or stop now." Mr. Rogers said, "All right, we will pay them ourselves. We will have to raise some money."

For one thing, Mr. Perley took a train load of cattle to Chicago, sold them and dumped in the money for part of what they had to pay out of their own pocket. But they satisfied their depositors, they were paid in full.

The writer has been in Broken Bow since that time with Mr. Perley and can assure the reader that when Mr. P. visits there he is very welcome. At one time Mr. P. managed a bank for the late Silas Burnham of Lincoln.

On one of his trips to get his stock in near town for the winter, he agreed to bring in some good steers for a neighbor. The steers were better than his own. In coming to a ranch on a cross road he saw a stranger come out from the house. The man hailed him and said, "What will you take per head right through for that bunch?" Mr. Perley hesitated a bit as the good steers were not his, and said, "I was not planning to sell them all." Again the man said, "I asked you what you would take per head right through."

In that country, at that time, a remark like that was a dare. Mr. Perley had to answer. He said, "I will take so much."

"Drive them right in that gate there," was what the stranger said.

Mr. Perley took the check and hurried to Lincoln. He asked Mr. ——— if it was good. His answer was, "Get all you can of them." Then his job was to buy the good steers of his neighbor. He was feeling rather nervous the next morning when he asked his friend what he would take for those twenty steers he drove in. The neighbor said he did not plan to sell them that fall. "But you would sell them?" "Why yes"—and named a price that gave Mr. Perley some profit. Mr. P. said as slowly as he could, taking a gold piece from his pocket, "Take this to bind the trade, I will bring you a check for the balance."

Mr. Perley had numerous interesting experiences while there in Nebraska for some twenty years One was being the first Mayor of the town But with it all he paid his bills—and still does, while enjoying the benefits of an oil burner in his boiler and music from radio in his living room at his home in Ipswich, Mass.

More Than Ever It's Things To Wear
This Christmas

Men always have preferred things to wear to gadgets and gewgaws. This year many actually need them. Husbands and Fathers have foregone new suits and overcoats so that wives and children would not feel the pinch; many a young fellow has seen the price of longed-for ties or shirts invested in a dinner or movies. Now is the time to make it up to them, and give sensible, stylish things to wear. The picture above gives you many a suggestion you will find here at our store. Come and look.

BOY SCOUTS' HOSPITAL FOR TOYS

Norway troop Boy Scouts have started a toy repair shop to reclaim and make good broken down toys to be given away in the Community Christmas campaign. Any crippled articles like dolls, juvenile furniture, mechanical toys, in fact anything that can be repaired may be left at the L. F. Pike Co. or given to Scout Master Ernest Moores.

This will mean a lot for children who perhaps are sure to miss the thrill and pleasure of receiving a generous donation from Santa Claus. The work will do the Scouts a lot of good and help them to live up to the pledge "Do one good turn every day."

EASTERN STAR

Oxford Chapter, O. E. S. held its December meeting Tuesday evening and despite the extreme cold and wind, the attendance was very good.

Supper was served by Mrs. Alice Wiggin, Mrs. Edna Longley, Mrs. Agnes Seavey, Mrs. Louise Wood, Mrs. Ella Perry, George Wood, Windsor Chute, Fred H. Perry and Leon M. Longley. Degrees were conferred on one candidate. The Past Officers presided, with Mrs. Winifred Bickford acting as Worthy Matron and H. Knox Bickford as Worthy Patron. Other past officers assisted. The work was done in a very creditable manner.

The next meeting takes place January 9, which will be the annual meeting for election of officers and annual reports.

The W. C. T. U. held an interesting and enjoyable meeting at the pleasant home of Mrs. Elizabeth Boynton, Tuesday afternoon. Fine reports of the work of several departments were presented and Mrs. Retta Jackson gave a much appreciated reading from Dickins' "Christmas Carol."

Walter Young of Portland is visiting his mother, Mrs. Evelyn Young while the shoe business is slack where he works.

The interior of the salesroom at the Norway Buick Co. is being refinished in white enamel and old ivory.

A break in the water pipe on Cottage Street opposite the residence of Mrs. Mary Briggs has not been located after nearly two days of digging. Charles Blaquiere believes the trouble to be in a service pipe but not the spot where water is bubbling up. Ground is frozen to the depth of 26 inches at that place and a torch is used.

Stores are ready for Christmas business. Stocks are complete with the season's novelties and articles sure to appeal to practical shoppers. Much has been done with decorations to bring out the Christmas spirit. Residences are showing window lights, wreaths with illuminated Christmas trees prominent on a number of streets.

NORTHWEST NORWAY

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Frechette and son spent the day, Sunday, at Jack Heath's.

Mrs. Nellie Damgaard spent one day recently with her father, Freeland Adams.

Donald Mason and Dr. Stuart of South Paris were callers at Jack Heath's, Sunday afternoon.

August Tuominen and Jack Heath are cutting wood for Mike Somoular.

Andress Heath and Marion are both sick with stomach trouble at the present time.

Coming Events

Dec. 14—Joint Concert, Men's Chorus and P. H. S. Band, Grange Hall, South Paris.
Dec. 14-15—"The World's All Right," Norway Grange Hall.
Dec. 14—Universalist Ladies' Circle, Supper and Entertainment, Concert Hall.
Dec. 17—Twin Town Men's Bible Class, I. O. O. F. Dining Hall, South Paris, 6:30 p. m.
Dec. 17—Basket Ball, Brunswick vs. N. & P., Norway Opera House, 2 p. m.
Jan. 5—Methodist Drama, Norway Grange Hall.

The Canadian Express delivery auto, operated by Alton L. Curtis, appears in a new coat of paint, inside and out, with aluminum painted roof. It looks good.

Mrs. Alfred J. Dyer attended a poultry school at The Carpenter Hotel, Manchester, N. H., Monday. She went in company with Mrs. Ellen Akers of Rumford.

Mrs. Inez B. Hills will leave for Florida, December 26, for the remainder of the winter. She goes in company with her friend, Mrs. Perry, and her brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Bowes, of Rockland. They will make the trip via auto and take their time along the way.

Lake Temple Pythian Sisters will have a supper, tree and program for the children, Saturday night, at Pythian Hall. Each sister will bring a gift for the tree. On Tuesday evening, Dec. 19, the Pythian Sisters have their own tree in the same hall. An exchange of gifts will be made.

Albert Thompkins, formerly of Norway, who has a beautiful singing voice, sang at the Metropolitan Theatre in New York, all last week. Mr. Thompkins visited in Norway two weeks ago. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Thompkins, who lived in Norway when Albert was born.

Don't forget to help the Community Charity Christmas. Money may be sent to Mrs. Minola Aldrich, Beal Street and other contributions left at Swett's Shoe Store, Norway.

Mrs. Alice Young a practical nurse of wide experience has an ad in this issue, soliciting work in her line. Read ad for particulars.

Get some of the new stationery with name and address printed on it at this office. The stock is a white laid paper and comes neatly packed in a box, one hundred envelopes and 100 sheets of paper—just the thing for everyone. See ad in this issue.

A Norway item clipped from an exchange is of interest to a South Paris clergyman.

"The Heywood Club at Crockett Ridge is planning a public dance, Wednesday evening. Supper will be served at 6.30 and the Rev. R. H. Colby of South Paris will be the speaker."

Somehow we've remarked before this that we didn't like deer meat. Under certain camp conditions have eaten it and called it O. K. for nothing better was available.

Not so was the sample of deer steak recently given us by John Shepard. It was tender and good, even in civilized surroundings. Thanks!

Carroll Swan is successor to Robert B. Thomas, the almanac maker for the past 140 years. Think of it! Last year 77,000 copies were sold and this year over 250,000. Carroll believes in advertising.

It's a good thing and for sale at all book stores or send direct to him at 926 Park Square Building, Boston, Mass., inclosing 15 cents coin or stamps, and you will get the worth of your money.

A letter received says: "I wish to state that I think it would be to your advantage if you would start an agricultural column in your paper, with a few farmers of practical experience as writers, letting them take turns one a week around the circle of perhaps a half dozen. I think it would add subscribers enough to more than offset the cost." Note—Articles are always acceptable. Anyone wishing to contribute, feel free to send them in.

Miss Marion Card of South Paris has brought in a package of tinfoil weighing a little over two pounds for the Weary Club.

Ned Packard of Pleasant Street, noted for his veracity, has six pullets. One day last week they laid seven eggs, the next five. Believe it or not. George Dunn believes it for he says he had the same thing happen with him.

On Sunday one Norway lady put the low temperature to a practical use by freezing ice cream, without ice. She mixed the cream in the usual way, set it out of doors and by frequently stirring it, had as good results as with the use of ice—practical economy.

Believe it or not, thermometers in town have been showing from zero to four below, but at the L. F. Pike Co. the red fluid remains at 102 in the shade. Many have grown pop-eyed over the contradiction and blame the instrument for not keeping within the code. Not long ago some investigator held a lighted match under the bulb. The bulb smashed but the column of liquid remained intact. tat's all.

Here is some nerve! Don't let Arthur Staples, editor and optimist of Lewiston, read it.

Legislative Document No. 11, relative to fishing in Inland waters of Maine:

Whereas, the inhabitants of the State of Maine are seriously affected by the financial depression and are in destitute circumstances, and,

Whereas, if the inhabitants of the State of Maine could fish in the inland waters they could obtain food and thus relieve the danger of starvation, and,

Whereas, in the judgment of the Legislature these facts create an emergency within the meaning of Section 16 of Article 31 of the constitution of Maine and require the following legislation as immediately necessary for the preservation of the public peace, health, and safety, now therefore, be it:

Enacted that we—the starving people—be permitted to fish through the ice for pickerel as in years past.

And thus we pray for immediate permission so to do.

A bountiful supper of scallops, cold meats, pie, cake and coffee was served by Mabel Worcester, Sadie Cole, and Mary Ladd. Dancing and cards were enjoyed later in the evening.

THE GIFT

you might forget

THINK—you parents! Have you forgotten the one priceless gift of all? Have you forgotten eyesight? . . . No, don't give your boy or girl an eye examination, or a pair of glasses as a Christmas present.

Have those child-eyes examined now — today — before Christmas comes. Then, fill the stockings, load the tree, for you have given the children in addition, the one priceless gift—the lasting gift of good vision.

An Old Violin

Dates Back to 1716

Will Jackson of South Paris has a violin that belonged to his great grandfather and is considered one of the best and has been used by several fine players and pronounced one out of many. It contains the following inscription:

"Fried Aug. Glass Verfertigt
Nach Antonius Stradvarius Fies
Fabrikat in Cremona 1736
G. A. Peretzschner
Markneu Kirchen
nach
Antonius Stradvarius Cremonae
Facteat Anno 1716"

Mr. Jackson, who is interested in violins, has a clipping which is headed "Upsets Traditions on Violins" and goes on to say: "Soviet-made violins outclassed seasoned bluebloods like Stradivarius, Guarneri and Amati in a free for all contest among old and new instruments, conducted at the Moscow Conservatory, recently.

"Several hundred picked musicians, among them leading composers and conductors, acted as judges, as one after another of the competing violins were played by outstanding virtuosi. They judged the timbre of the instrument, not quality of the players.

"Elaborate precautions were taken to prevent all possibility of prejudice, favoritism, nepotism or any tendency to 'play the fight.' The violins were numbered with nothing to indicate their pedigree. The players were blindfolded and the playing was done behind a screen.

"The world-famous Stradivarius came in sixth. Ahead of it were five instruments born and bred under the red flag of the Soviets.

"The judges were astonished and averred the contest has upset a good many traditional notions about aged violins."

ALMANAC HAS COME

The Old Farmer's Almanac is at hand in its 142d year, and with the same cover. A peculiarity of its calendar is that there is no full moon in the month of February, but to make up for it there are two full moons in March. Of the four eclipses of the year, none are visible in New England. One of them is a total eclipse but we shall not see it, as the shadow is wasted on the islands of Borneo, Celibes, Gigolo and others, and on the expanse of the Pacific Ocean. We certainly should have no complaint, when we got a real total eclipse last summer, right at home—the spectacle of a lifetime.

It would seem that two or three generations ago occasionally people came from the sticks into the big town, and were met with great joy. The Portland Press Herald, in its department of ancient local history, gathered from the press of that day, under the head of "Seventy-five Years Ago Today," a few days since had the following paragraph, which is of interest, especially to the people of this town: "Recent outrages in the city indicate the presence of a gang of footpads. Last week a lad named David Drinkwater was knocked down and robbed of his watch on Cumberland Street. Thursday, Mr. G. F. Brown of Paris was accosted by two men near the corner of Sumner and Hancock Streets, who said they must arrest him for passing counterfeit money. He took out his money to show it was all gold, when they took it and marched off. Saturday, Mr. John Harmon, sexton of the Second Parish Church, was accosted by two men who seized him by the arms, went through his pockets and made off with his purse containing two dollars."

Our community Christmas tree was set in the Square last week. It is a tall and pointed fir.

Mrs. Clarence G. Morton accompanied J. Harold Neal and family when they returned from the Thanksgiving recess to their home in Brattleboro, Vt. After a visit of some days in Brattleboro, she went to the home of her sister, Mrs. Haliburton Crandlemire, in Torrington, Ct., where she is now visiting.

DAMON-BRIGGS

Frank A. Damon and Martha A. Briggs both of South Paris were united in marriage Dec. 9, at the bride's home on Elm Hill. The double ring service was performed by Rev. Rensel H. Colby and only members of the families were present. A reception followed and refreshments were served.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Briggs of South Paris. She was graduated at South Paris High School and is employed in the shoe shop at Norway.

Mr. Damon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Damon of South Paris and Norway and is a shoe worker.

The Thalian Club of the Congregational Church will meet Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Beryl Farnham. Assistant hostesses are Mrs. Norrine Bailey, Mrs. Gladys Davis and Mrs. Louise Patterson.

Professor O. Wellman of the University of New Hampshire, his daughter, Mrs. Eleanor B. Lord and his six year old granddaughter, died Friday from injuries received when their car was cut in half by a fire truck in Somerville, Mass. Prof. Wellman was principal of the high school here around 1899.

Skating is being enjoyed at the rink on the athletic field. The place had been used some last week but a good spraying Sunday night made the surface just right for sport.

SOUTH PARIS

An Old Violin

Dates Back to 1716

Will Jackson of South Paris has a violin that belonged to his great grandfather and is considered one of the best and has been used by several fine players and pronounced one out of many. It contains the following inscription:

"Friel Aug. Glass Verfertiget
Nach Antonius Stradivarius Fies
Fabrikat in Cremona 1730
G. A. Peretzschner
Marknen Kirchen
nach
Antonius Stradvarius Cremonae
Pectear Anno 1716"

Mr. Jackson, who is interested in violins, has a clipping which is headed "Upsets Traditions on Violins" and goes on to say: "Soyiet-made violins outclassed such bloodreds like Stradivarius, Guarneri and Amati in a free for all contest among old and new instruments, conducted at the Moscow Conservatory, recently.

"Several hundred picked musicians, among them leading composers and conductors, acted as judges, as one after another of the competing violins were played by outstanding virtuosi. They judged the timbre of the instrument, not quality of the players.

"Elaborate precautions were taken to prevent all possibility of prejudice, favoritism, nepotism or any tendency to 'throw the fight.' The violins were numbered with nothing to indicate their pedigree. The players were blindfolded and the playing was done behind a screen.

"The world-famous Stradivarius came in sixth. Ahead of it were five instruments born and bred under the red flag of the Soviets.

"The judges were astonished and stunned. The contest has upset a good many traditional notions about aged violins."

ALMANAC HAS COME

The old Farmer's Almanac is at hand, with its 141st year, and with the same old cover. A peculiarity of its calendar is that there is no full moon in the month of February, but to make up for it there are two full moons in March. Of the eclipses of the year, none are visible in New England. One of them is a total eclipse, but we shall not see it, as the show is wasted on the islands of Borneo, Celebes, Gigolo and others, and in the expanse of the Pacific Ocean. We certainly shall have no complaint, when we get a real total eclipse last summer, right at home—the spectacle of a lifetime.

It would seem that two or three generations had occasionally people came from the woods into the big town, and were met with great joy. The Portland Press Herald, in its department of ancient local history, gathered from the press of that day, under the head of "Seventy-five Years Ago Today," a few days since had the following paragraph, which is of interest, especially to the people of this town: "Recent outrages in the city indicate the presence of a gang of loafers. Last week a lad named David Drinkwater was knocked down and robbed of his watch on Cumberland Street. Tuesday, Mr. G. F. Brown of Paris was accosted by two men near the corner of Summer and Hancock Streets, who said they must arrest him for passing counterfeit money. He took out his money to show it was all gold, when they took it and marched off. Saturday, Mr. John Harmon, sexton of the Second Parish Church, was accosted by two men who seized him by the arms, went through his pockets and made off with his purse containing two dollars."

Our community Christmas tree was set in the Square last week. It is a tall and pointed fir.

JOINT CONCERT

The joint concert of the South Paris High School Band, under the direction of Leyland Whipple and the South Paris Male Chorus, will be given this Thursday evening at Grange Hall The proceeds of the evening will be used for the benefit of the school band.

COMMUNITY CLUB

The day's program at the Community Club, Tuesday afternoon had as the main feature the reading of the play, "Autumn Crocus," by Mrs. Dagmar Portholm Petersen of Portland. This play presents to the audience a twenty-four hour interlude in the life of a woman past her youth, who fell in love with a man whom she found to be a married man with children but she will always cherish the memory of those few hours when she was ready for almost any recklessness. The play is pretty heavily loaded with verbose and commonplace dialogue, but brings out its motiff strongly.

Its effect was enhanced by the effective rendering of Mrs. Petersen, which all enjoyed. A number of guests were present from the Bates Literary Club of West Paris whose members were specially invited. The musical number was a solo by Mrs. Marion Wheeler Walker, with Mrs. Stella W. Burnham at the piano.

CASCO BANK AND TRUST CO. OPENED MONDAY

Complete and Unrestricted Banking Service

The Casco Bank and Trust Company, with seven branch organizations, opened on Monday, as was announced. In Portland the main bank occupies the quarters formerly occupied by the Casco Mercantile Trust Co. in Monument Sq. Branches are at South Portland, Woodfords, Bridgton, Buckfield, South Paris, Limerick and West Buxton.

Roger W. Flint is manager at Bridgton, James W. Emery at Buckfield and Paul Whitten at South Paris.

With the opening of the Casco on Monday, South Paris had a complete and unrestricted banking service for the first time since the bank holiday of last winter.

The Casco has asked for membership in the new deposit guaranty of the Federal government and is now awaiting a response.

SHIPPING CHRISTMAS TREES

Of the ten million Christmas trees cut annually in the United States, approximately four million come from Maine, according to the statement of A. D. Nutting, forestry specialist for the Extension Service. The bulk of these Maine trees come from Aroostook and Washington Counties, but other sections including Oxford County, contribute.

The last two carloads from South Paris were shipped by the Meserve Lumber Company the first of the week. Three cars had been shipped the preceeding Sunday, and in several other towns, shipments larger or smaller were made. All the trees shipped from here were fir. Considering that the trees are tied up in bunches of three to five, and that there are usually somewhere from six to seven hundred bunches in a car load, a car load counts up quite a number.

REMOVING MILLETT'S SHOP

The work of tearing down the old H. P. Millett shops on Church Street recently purchased by the American Legion, has begun, and quite a part of the roof is already down.

A. F. Henelt of New York City, of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was in town the first of the week in connection with the opening of the Casco Bank and Trust Co. He is a Federal bank inspector.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Robinson, Mrs. Hazel Grant, Robert Smith and Miss Muriel Tripp attended the prize speaking contest at West Paris, Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Walker of New York, who have been guests of relatives here for several days, left Monday for their home.

Mrs. Wilbur Swan, Theresa and Roland Swan went to Portland, Sunday, to visit Mr. Swan, who is in the Maine General Hospital and doing well.

Mrs. George Morton will entertain at her home Friday afternoon, the Optimistic Class of the Universalist Church.

Mrs. Ethel Knight is moving from the Fletcher rent on Maple Street to the B. Y. Russell rent on Gothic Street.

Shaw's Orchestra plays for a dance and oyster stew supper at the Streaked Mountain Club House, Friday night, December 15th.

Uncle Henry Finally Got Married

But the Preliminary Woes Were Those of Jack

One of those things designed for laughing purposes only was the comedy "Henry's Wedding" which was put on at the Grange Hall, Thursday and Friday evenings, sponsored by Paris Grange. Miss Grace Joslin had been here for some time previous, coaching the play and attending to the various matters of business connected with it.

The bills said that the cast was composed of 125 prominent local people, and that wasn't far off as an estimate. They also said that these 125 people couldn't put on a poor show, and at any rate, they didn't.

The basis of the play was one of those foolish wills which frequently figure on the stage and occasionally in real life. Grandfather Somebody had provided in his will that the sum of one or two hundred thousand dollars (it doesn't really affect the play whether it was one or the other) should be given to his grandson Jack, on his twenty-fifth birthday, provided that he was married at that time, and his uncle Henry still remained a bachelor. The sum named was to go to Henry if he was married before Jack reached the specified age. This provision did not worry Jack, as Uncle Henry was a hardboiled old bachelor anyway, and considered safe.

But the action quickens up considerably the day before Jack's twenty-fifth birthday, when Uncle Henry appears with his fiancee, ready for a double wedding that night. This spreads consternation among Jack's friends. If Uncle Henry was married that night, Jack's fortune, including more or less that was spent in advance, was gone.

The occasion seemed to call for extreme measures, and Jack and his fellow-conspirators undertook the kidnaping of Uncle Henry and carried it into effect. From then on, things happened. A meeting of the Mystic Shrine was held, which gave opportunity for the singing of some Negro spirituals and other songs by a chorus in blackface. Of course there were songs and dances interspersed with the dialogue and the other features of the program, al of which were exceedingly well done.

And also of course the play came out all right, as plays for laughing purposes must; and of course it was mostly nonsense anyway; and of course Jack got his money; though by just what process all these things were accomplished, recollection does not now reveal.

The great laughing feature of the play was the parade of wedding guests—1890 guests at a 1940 wedding. When you can get Fred Cushman, Ernest Moores, Bert Dodge, Guy Buck and other staid citizens in feminine attire, to cross the stage and exhibit themselves to the audience, said audience is bound to laugh—can't help it. Indeed, a little more of the same thing would have gone well.

The speaking parts of the comedy were the following:

Uncle Henry, bachelor bridegroom.....
.....Robert Smith
Jack, his nephew, also a bridegroom.....
.....Gordon Thayer
Samantha Green, Henry's bride.....
.....Stella Richardson
Ted, Jack's friend.....Ralph Stiles
Harris, Jack's friend.....Oliver Swett

Our Western Trip

Story of the Travels of Mrs Mabel Jillson and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lombard of Bolster's Mills, in Summer of 1933

Chapter V

Here at Hot Springs National Park we found a large city and the great buildings advertising baths with grand sounding names over all of the springs. There was an observation tower on top of the hill and a frame built 168 ft. higher than that with an elevator to carry any up to that height that wished to go to look out over the city. We went on some 25 miles farther before we found a suitable place to camp and this was under some nice trees beside a stream of good clear water connected with a filling station. We stayed here through another day to wash and rest. After a good rain during the night, we packed up and went on through Little Rock and Memphis, Tenn., where we crossed the Miss. River over a big bridge with singe lanes for traffic on the outside with the railroad running between.

The Natural Bridge

Out past Bolivar we stopped for the night at Russoms tourist camp where we encountered three more good showers through the night so packed up again wet and went on to Gainsboro where we left our road for a distance of 6 miles to see the natural bridge that a wealthy cotton manufacturer has started to commercialize. There is really quite an unusual formation of rock with a great hole worked through it and they are damming back the water and have put in cement floor over a part of the space and are going to build an orchestra pit so to have dances at some time in the future. There was a large cave connected with the grounds worked out by water, which they had been using as a refrigerator and a good cool one it made.

Visit Muscle Shoals

Getting back to Gainsboro, we took a southerly course to Florence, Ala., to get a look at the Muscle Shoals project. It is a splendid dam with a road built across it nine-tenths of a mile over to the power house. The guide took us down eight stories to see the generator room where at present there are eight at work with room to put in more if the time ever comes to use them. This project cost 47 million dollars and they are in hopes to get some returns in the near future.

Getting back to our road, we went along a few miles up stream to where a new bridge had been built over the Tennessee river and camped beside the river over night. We bought a couple of bluefish of a fisherman here and fried them for supper.

The next morning we got back to our former paved road at Pulaski via Athens. From that town to the next one was a stretch of 28 miles of new concrete with asphalt top and not a joint to be seen some nice and so noticeable after what we had been on cutting across country as we had. At Cowan we started to climb the Cumberland Mts. across the top the two thriving towns of Sewanee, a college town, and Monteagle, a summer resort, were stationed. Then we went down the other side until we crossed the Tennessee river via a toll bridge and soon came to Chattanooga. Just outside this city on the Benton road, we camped for the night beside a grand spring of water just a bit away from the road.

In Mountains and Ashville

The next morning after going through Benton, our road turned abruptly to the right leading us over the Kimsby mountains, a distance of 33 miles, till we dropped into Ducktown. On going down the further side, we run into a posse of men who had been hunting a boy who was lost in the woods overnight. He had just been found. At the next town of Murphy we had crossed into the state of North Carolina and still in the mountains. We next went through Nantahala Gorge, and climbing out the other end brought us to Bryson City. After going through the town of Sylva, we camped again beside a nice spring. Here we stayed over another day and when we went on we found it was only a short distance to Ashville, a very pretty city at quite an elevation. Wishing to see the country around Hendersonville, we took the southerly direction and went through that city and as far as Flat Rock, taking a swing around East Flat Rock and back to Ashville. From this city, we picked up No. 10 road toward the east. Soon after leaving this city behind, we went down to a lower elevation and traveled toward Winston, Salem. However, we camped some thirty miles short of that city.

In the Shenandoah Valley

The next morning we soon reached this city and it struck us as a thriving, interesting one. At this point we picked up Route 311 which was to take us up the Shenandoah valley. This was an interesting historical rolling country with much tobacco and sugar cane growing.

Beyond Roanoke we saw several big caverns and the natural bridge of Virginia advertised, but we did not visit them. At night we camped at Van Pelts tourist camp in Verona. The next morning we kept on up the valley, going through the cities of Winchester and Harrisonburg and crossed the state line of West Virginia at Ridgeway. However, we did not stay long within this state for at Williamsport we crossed the Potomac river into Maryland, thence via Hagerstown into Pennsylvania, through Chambersburg, Carlisle and Harrisburg.

Following the Susquehanna

After crossing the Susquehanna river, we followed it down to old Fort Hunter and camped in a park nearby. Had a tire go wrong just a short way in Pennsylvania and a filling station attendant took Charles to Greencastle to see some retreads. He bought two of them which have yet to prove their quality. On starting the next morning, we found a heavy fog to drive in for quite a distance but it cleared away finally. We were in sight of the river all day, going through the cities of Sudbury and Wilkesbarre. Ate dinner at a lunch room in Kingston, a suburb of the last named city. Entered New York state some thirty miles east of Binghampton.

At this city there was still quite a crowd around the railroad tracks where the accident had recently occurred and several lives lost. In this city we picked up our route 7, direct to Albany. However, we got only as far as overnight cabins, just outside Oneonta with thunder showers threatening during the evening.

The next morning we got throught Oneonta before the traffic got going much and after making about one hundred miles, reached the pretty capitol city, situated on the Hudson river.

Took the Mohawk Trail

We were bent on taking the Mohawk Trail through Massachusetts, so we had to turn north after crossing the Hudson river to Troy and then turning eastward picked up No. 2 road through the Berkshires. At several high points along this trail observation towers have been set up from which one can see three states and from seven to ten towns and many rivers on a clear day, but they were of no use to us as a haze covered the hills. Coming down from this pretty country, we crossed the nice city of Greenfields and camped on a camp ground maintained by the city of Athol, just after crossing the city.

Home Again

The next morning we left the Mohawk Trail at Williamtown and came into Portsmouth, N. H. via Lawrence and Lowell. The state of Maine presented itself at Kittery and coming through about the middle of the afternoon, feeling a joy of relief to be there after traveling a trifle short of twelve thousand miles and not a scratch. We had been in twenty-seven states and two provinces in Canada and consumed 850 gallons of gasoline at an average cost of a cent and one-half a mile to haul us.

Hill Billy Number

No radio broadcast would be complete without featuring the Hill Billies in their old-time mountain songs and ballads. Such characters as Si Simpkins, the hillbilly who cut down the old pine tree, is played by Ernest Descoteau and Hiram Zlich, played by Gerry Locke. A real old-tme square dance, with a fiddle, guitar, harmonica is also in this scene. Those taking part in the square dance are Fred Perry, Grant Abbott, William Young, Merton Wyman and Harry Stimson. The high spot of the Hill Billy number, however, is the pantomiming of an old-time melo-drama. It is called "Frankie and Johnnie" or "He Was Her Man, But He Done Her Wrong." Hiram sings the song of "Frankie and Johnnie" while Si fills in the words. Merton Wyman appears as Frankie, George Bell as Johnnie, Amos Noble as Smokey Joe and George Young as the Vamp, Nellie Blys. They pantomime the story and action with exaggerated movements, and it is a scream from start to finish. They are dressed in the extreme style of the olden days, and the number is always a sure-fire hit.

Vested Choir

One of the most unique and pleasing numbers from the standpoint of group singing, under the leadership of Mrs. Ella Partridge, promises to be the Vested Choir Number. This group will sing a number of anthems and famous sacred songs. Arthur Holman will be the special reader for this number.

Special Costumes and Routines

A special scene called "Memories" featuring Mrs. Marjorie Henderson as the soprano soloist, will open the number with a group of famous love songs, and the Misses Evelyn Brown, Maxine Richardson, Athalie Perry and Beatrice Gallant will be the Colonial Men and Women who wear colorful costumes and powdered wigs and do a minuet. The chorus girls appear in long ruffled dresses and parasols in a contrasting shade, and do a delightful number called "Old-Fashioned Garden." Another chorus comes in immediately, offering "Wait Till the Cows Come Home." The scene uses numbers and songs from the latest musical comedies and operettas and closes with "The Song of the Vagabonds," a smashing number sung by the famous men's chorus, assisted by the girls.

Ernest Moores will appear as Skipper Ericson and give a dramatic reading and song, "I'm Waiting for Ships that Never Come In." He will be assisted in this number by eight girls dressed in sailor costumes.

Stars and Stripes Revue

A colorful revue, taking the audience by song and music through the progress of our nation, is the last spectacular number that brings the entire show to a whirlwind finish, and makes one realize from these Songs That Built the Nation that the title of the show is well chosen and it is true that "The World's All Right."

The leads of this number are William Hall as a Revolutionary Soldier, John Cleveland as the Hero of the North, A. A. Towne as the Hero of the South, Mrs. Addie Lovejoy as the Mother of the Blue and Gray, and Bill Bailey, Francis Wiles, Merle Brown, Bob Hosmer and Franklyn Towne as soldiers of the A. E. F. Miss Charlotte Leland as the Red Cross Nurse and Maybelle Bell as Miss Columbia, while Philip Stone takes the part of Uncle Sam.

With such a prominent cast of characters, an the best musical talent for the group and chorus numbers, we feel that it is true. "You will cheer up when you see The World's All Right."

The tickets for the performance are to be reserved at Davis' I. G. A. Store, free of charge.

"Thar's Gold in Them Thar Hills."

Agnes F. Benson of North Fork, Madera County, California

Yes, it is still here in the hills and though not in the quantities in which it was found eighty years ago when the mining camps were in full swing, there is still enough to make prospecting an interesting and often profitable work. Many are making a comfortable living mining, and many more during this depression are managing to keep body and soul together by using a shovel and pan and living under a scrap of canvas with no rent to pay. These latter are found scattered all along the upper San Joaquin and its tributaries and camped near the dumps of old workings where in the boom times much low grade ore was wasted. Their daily earning run from two to two dollars. Some of the more prosperous have sluice-boxes and small pumps run by discarded Ford engines.

Occasionally a real strike is made. One driver of a school-bus tramped over the hills in his spare time, found rock of promising appearance, sunk a shaft, rigged a hoist from the crane of an old auto-wrecker with an empty coal oil can for a bucket, and is now on a vein running about seven hundred dollars to the ton—someone else drives the bus. A few die and pack animals went to the mountains deer hunting, it is not said whether they got their deer or not, but they came home with five thousand dollars in gold on which they had stumbled. Several members of C. C. C. camps have made quite a little on the side during the time they have not worked.

Two Kinds of Mining

Mining here is of two sorts, placer and "hard-rock" mining and placer mining. Hard-rock mining means that the gold is found as an ore and must be dug, drilled or blasted from the ground in a ledge, the ore crushed and if the gold is fairly pure, it can be separated by amalgamating, but if scattered through the ore, it has to be smelted. In placer mining the gold is found free in sand or gravel or in crevices in rocks where it has been washed; it may be in sandbars, in the bed of a stream, in the banks of eddies, or among tree-roots. The typical placer miner uses a shovel and gold pan.

The gold-pan is about the diameter of an old-fashioned milk pan, two and a half inches in depth and with sides sloping in at an agle of forty-five degrees, pressed from one piece of soft steel—for the common frying-pan has been used with success. The gravel is placed in the pan, the pan dipped in water, and the water "sloshed" around with a circular motion. The coarser gravel and small rocks come to the top and are picked off, the pan dipped again and the process repeated. This is done again and again till only a little black sand is left in the bottom of the pan. Less water is dipped up and the pan rotated slowly at a slight angle and the bits of gold begin to show along the upper edge of the sand. If it is coarse gold, the bits can be picked out, but if it is fine gold it and the last of the black sand are mixed with quicksilver, the gold being picked up by the quicksilver and the sand left, then this amalgam is placed in a retort and heated enough to cause the quicksilver to pass off as vapor and leave a button of gold. If the miner is more prosperous, he uses a sluice-box, which is a long, wooden trough with a flat bottom, covered with riffles filled with quicksilver, or with the plain riffles. The sluice box sits at a slight angle so that water will run through it freely, gravel is poured in at the upper end and a steady stream of water carries it over the riffles, the gold and fine sand being held and the dross passing out at the lower end. If there is quicksilver in the riffles, the amalgam is removed and run through the retort, if there is no quicksilver the gold and remaining sand are treated as in panning.

Rocker Method

Between panning and using a sluice box is the rocker method. The rocker looks like an old-fashioned hooded cradle. The rockers each have a pin in the center which fits into a hole in the end piece of a rectangular frame on which the rocker rests. This frame is pitched at a slight angle so that the water will run out of the rocker freely. What would be the hooded end of the cradle has a square wooden box with perforated metal bottom and a handle standing up midway of the side. This box is removable and under it is a cloth screen with wooden sides half an inch high, the screen being slanted toward the head of the cradle and having a half-inch between it and the wall. What would be the foot of the cradle is open with a half inch strip fastened across the bottom. The gravel is poured into the wooden box and water is poured on it steadily, but not too fast. The rocker is rocked by holding the handle at the top, rocked sufficiently to have the water pass completely from side to side as it flows out. The coarsest rocks and pebbles stay in the box, the finest sand, gravel and gold stay on cloth screen, some of the fine sand and sometimes bits of gold are held by the cleat (riffle) across the lower end of the rocker, the rest of the gravel passes out. The black sand that remains can be panned and the gold picked out if it is coarse, or if fine it can be amalgamated. The "tailings" left back of the riffle are treated the same way to save any bits of gold that may have reached them through the use of too much water or from too violent rocking.

Pal's Attack of Gold Fever

Pal had a slight attack of gold-fever during the summer and went for a few days with an old miner who wished to revisit his diggings of some twenty years ago. They found the location had been thoroughly dug over and were not able to find even "colors." The fever abated only to reappear in more violent form when an Indian woman brought in several dollars worth of gold she had panned in spare moments and cashed it at the store while he was there. Since then he has prospected everywhere—there are even holes at the end of the sink-drain, though he swears he was digging angleworms there. They have gotten together quite an outfit of tools including two sizes of shovels, the remains of a pickaxe, a mattox, an iron spoon and several hooks and scrapers made of rake-teeth and roofing-tin for cleaning out crevices, three gold-pans, a patent separator, two six-pound lard pails, an abandoned rocker in very good condition and a long-handled dipper to supply water to the rocker, the dipper being made out of a two-pound coffee-can with a three-foot wooden handle. Whenever by experimental panning they have found promising "colors" they set up the rocker at the edge of the stream and pack the dirt to it in the lard-pails, it taking eight to ten pails to one rocking. Having rocked out all the sand and gravel possible, one pans the contents of but not to rock that precious rocker, or pan the sand, nosser! The gold they get is sometimes in flakes and sometimes bits of gold wire.

The other morning we arrived at the present diggings to find that the San Joaquin Light and Power Company had opened one of their storage dams and the creek was rising rapidly. We got there just in time to save the rocker which was about to start down stream, Pal doing the Colossus of Rhodes on two slippery rocks with the rocker clutched in both hands till we could reach him.

LIBERATE THE ANIMALS

Wild animals, confined in narrow quarters at some of the roadside resorts throughout this state and New Hampshire are beginning to assert themselves. Some little time ago a bear which had been left without food and water for several days, became so infuriated that he broke out of his enclosure and crushed a young child to death. Other reports of a like nature come from other sections.

It is the nature of the bear to roam the woods unfettered. In his natural habitat he is a harmless animal as far as human beings are concerned, unless he is cornered and then he is naturally equipped to take care of himself. But let alone, he probably would run from rather than toward a human being. It is a cruel practice to confine these animals in cages or small enclosures for the curious to gaze at and for the children to poke sticks at. Sometime there is going to be a law forbidding this pratice. If motorists would make it a point to shun places where such practices are employed it would go a long way toward the abolishment of the custom.—Bridgton News.

BRIDGTON HIGHLANDS

Celebrated Birthday—Moved Schoolhouse —Winter Activities.

James Fitzpatrick has been in Portland for the past week, buying out the stores as is his usual custom at this season of the year. He returned on Monday. Mrs. Fitzpatrick and Philip driving down for him.

Andrew Sanborn is so far recovered as to be able to ride to the village on Monday to have dinner with his grandfather, Enoch Sanborn, returning to his home in the afternoon. Andrew also celebrated his twenty-fourth birthday last week having a few guests to dinner.

Mrs. Harry Leavitt and Mrs. Jennie Leavitt visited Mrs. Mabelle Robinson, one afternoon last week, walking down from the Upper Ridge. The call was greatly appreciated by Mrs. Robinson, especially with the effort involved.

Miss Cora Emery has been a recent guest of the Misses Ella and Mabel Potter.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Dodge visited at the Ridgeway on Monday evening, the time being pleasantly spent with bridge.

Lawrence Brigham is a constant visitor at the home of Andrew Sanborn, to help the time pass pleasantly.

Harry Brigham has moved the ell of the Upper Ridge school house to a point opposite his home and will use the same for a blacksmith shop to replace the one burned some time since.

Arthur Sanborn, Charles Wiggin and Wint Soule are busy in the woods these cold days. Elden Drown is also getting out his years' supply.

Byron Whitehouse's barber shop is a busy place on a Sunday morning. The warm fires, the easy chairs and the genial personality of Byron make it a desirable meeting place. National and civic affairs receive due attention and sometimes lesser affairs, like those of the neighbors, for example. All in a friendly spirit, however.

Patchwork, crocheted rugs and knitting seem to be the favorite indoor sport of the housewives in this locality at the present time. Ella Potter is making a couple of very pretty quilt tops. Mrs. Fitzpatrick is chocheting a beautiful silk rug, Mrs. Wiggins is hooking an elaborate chair seat, and, Mrs. Leavitt is knitting mittens for the children of her neighborhood. When spring comes there will be something to show for the winter's work.

Philip Fitzpatrick is busy playing basketball this winter. He would play more if there were more nights in a week. He is a crack player anyway.

SPARE TIME

What is the value of spare time? The answer naturally would be, "It's how you spend it." If a man wastes away his spare time in idle chatter and play, it is worth little to anyone. If he puts his idle time in on proper study, his idle time will grow in value and in a few years it may be worth hundreds of dollars an hour.

Properly used, spare time can be worth as much as our imagination will estimate. But if time is wasted, it is not only worthless, but often very harmful.

It is said that Edison's spare time, Al Jolson's spare time, or Lindbergh's spare time is worth several thousand dollars an hour.

Lincoln, as well as many other great men, used his spare time well and grew from mediocre place to a place in the great hall of fame.

What is the value of your spare time? You are the one to give the answer. Don't wait too long to find out its worth to you.

THE BEST PROTECTION—AND THE BEST INVESTMENT, TOO

"No better protection than life insurance has ever been discovered," writes Paul Tomlinson, financial editor of Harper's Magazine, in the September issue. "No better protection exists today."

Thousands of Americans will say "Amen" to that. The past three years have been great enlighteners so far as what to do with one's money is concerned. They've demonstrated that economic law cannot be forever frustrated—that you can't double your money in a year or two and still be on the safe and conservative side. All of this has been an expensive lesson.

And now that recovery is on its way, the statistics are pointing to a gratifying increase in sales of life insurance. In the mind of the average citizen, a life policy is more than the best protection—it is likewise one of the very best investments. In one or another of its forms, it offers him what all investments are designed to provide—money for one's old age, the building of an estate, education for one's children, and so on—and it offers him the highest attainable degree of safety.

The chance is most negligible that a life insurance policy, purchased from an established, old-line company, will not be redeemed precisely as the contract designates.

How many other investments can offer so much!

QUIET COFFEE

The praises of coffee have been sung by many poets and myriad virtues have been attributed to it, but it has remained for Donald A. Laird, the eminent psychologist, to discover new values in "the cup that cheers but not inebriates".

Following three years of investigation, at Colgate University, into noise and its effects on the human system, Dr. Laird has announced that coffee has a markedly beneficial effect in offsetting the digestive ills caused by noise. After exhaustive tests with "human guinea pigs", he found that the aroma as well as the taste of coffee stimulate the flow of saliva and gastric juices, which noise retards.

Dr. Laird's findings are of interest to almost everyone, because nowadays, almost everyone drinks coffee, and almost everyone is subjected to the vexatious noises of modern life. But the psychologist stressed one point that should be especially taken to heart by every cook—he specified that coffee, to have a tonic value, must be clear and fresh. That is a good rule to follow, whether you drink your coffee in a cloister or a boiler factory.

THE WRECK

Lydia A. Ells, Berlin, N. H.

Bleached and battered, and broken,
Cast on a rocky shore;
The ship that weathered so many storms
Will sail the seas no more.

Proud in her snowy rigging,
Strong as ships are strong;
She sailed for distant harbors,
Nor found the voyage long.

She fought the gales in winter
And loitered in trade winds fair,
Now stripped of canvas and cordage,
She lies dismantled there.

Take her away from the ledges,
To where sky line meets the wave!
And give the old derelict
A decent ocean grave.

Land of the Hula Hula Girls

By Charles E. Waterman

One sometimes finds queer and unlooked for things in an attic—things very remote from the domicile where they were found. Something of that kind was found some years ago in the attic of an East Oxford house.

The house in question was for many years the home of the late George W. Robinson, who was a public man, having held about all the offices in the gift of the town, and naturally, the attic of his house might be expected to contain many old papers of historic interest. After his death, his son, George Oliver Robinson, a lawyer, who had lived in the west and been a bar-mate of Abraham Lincoln, returned to live in the old homestead. He had retired from practice and arrived at that time of life when his eyes were turned toward his youth. Naturally he ransacked the attic of the old house for things and documents of that far-away time. He found what he searched for and passed many hours in the perusal of musty papers. There were letters, too, and some of them were addressed to himself. A package of these were of special interest to him and brought back remembrances, not only of his own youth, but of a friend of that time and place, that, I believe, could not fail to be of interest to the public at large. They so impressed him that he came to the writer, then editor of The Mechanic Falls Ledger about having them published in that paper. He summed up the contents of the letters quite fully and gave a biographical sketch of the writer.

His talk was interesting and I agreed to publish the letters. That very night the old Robinson house burned with everything in it; so the letters were never published.

I have thought many times about them, and can give the story of their contents very much as it was given to me. I think it would interest Oxford County readers.

The writer of these letters was Samuel Chandler Wright, born over a century ago—in 1825, to be exact—a near neighbor to the Robinsons and boyhood friend of George Oliver Robinson. The Wright farm was too tame for Samuel as a boy, however, so he ran away and went to sea.

He joined a New Bedford whaling outfit, which was to cruise in the north Pacific Ocean, and so started on a five-year voyage. It was perfectly natural he should write to George Oliver, although the letters were not many and their dates far apart—mailed only when the ship reached some port with postal service, or crossed some ship homeward bound.

His ship went around Cape Horn into the Pacific and his first port of call in that ocean was the famous home of Robinson Crusoe, or his original, Alexander Selkirk, Juan Fernandez. It was a Chilian penal station at that time.

It was a mountainous island, upon the sides and summits of which skipped goats, although Wright saw none of them, and was told they did not venture near the settlement.

The next port of call was in the Hawaiian Islands, or Sandwich Islands as they were then known, and by the latter name Wright called them in his letters.

The name of the harbor in which the ship cast anchor I cannot recall, and I do not know as I was told. The entire group of islands formed a base for whaling operations. There were always a number of ships operating from this base. The blubber was tried out here, barrelled and stored until a sufficient cargo was secured, so that the stay of a ship on these islands might extend into years. Most of the letters were written from this base when the ship returned from a cruise, and were almost entirely about the islands and the natives.

That was away back in the early forties. Missionaries had arrived at that time, and a few plantations had been started; but as a whole the land was given over to the natives; and the letters were mostly about their curious customs, or lack of customs, their superstitions and their social life. They were a primitive people and a description of them could not fail to be interesting.

The islands were very popular with sailors, chiefly because of the friendliness of the natives, especially the female portion. They were gay and sporty, ever ready for a "mash." Dark-skinned, or dusky, perhaps, one would call them, but not uncomely, with a feminine taste in dress—that is, so far as their circumstances and environment would allow. Their costumes consisted mostly of sunny smiles and wreaths of flowers. Hawaii was and is a land of flowers, so that part of their costume was easy. This free and easy way was not confined to girlhood, but extended through life, or until the years seamed their faces with wrinkles.

It was a free-love paradise. Men and women lived together, it was true, as long as they cared for each other, then separated. There was neither law nor custom against it. The married couples, if they could be called married, led queer lives. Polygamy and polyandry were almost universal—that is, the men might have a dozen wives and the women a dozen husbands at the same time, to say nothing for lovers.

Of course there were children. Such a condition of things could not fail to produce them—too many of them. Even the natives realized an overproduction in this line. They did not face the problem as modern people do, with schemes of birth control. They let the babies come and then did away with them. They believed in sepelcher but they did not always bother to stop breath before burial; and the graves were most times in their own door yards. Old people were treated the same way. Infancy and senility were unbearable to the Polynesians. According to Wright, half of the baby population were buried alive before they had a week's existence. The girls were splendid creatures but the mothers had a prejudice against them. If any babies were to be saved, they were boys, so the male population largely exceeded the female.

Of course the male part of the population had queer manners and superstitions, of which Wright wrote more or less, but the female portion attracted him most. It was of such a nature they could scarcely fail to attract a man. Then, again, he was youthful—the time when "A young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love"—so the poet writes—and that may have had something to do with his observations; but his letters must have been interesting, and are now to a generation unborn at the time they were written. It seems something to be deplored that they could not have been put in type.

BATES—WEST PARIS

The friends of Frances A. Smith, daughter of Mildred D. Smith, will be interested to know of the good work she is doing in school She is in the seventh grade at Lincoln Junior High School, Portland. There are 500 pupils in her class and of that number Frances and one other were the only ones to get all E's on their rank cards for the first semester. Frances has never had anything but an E since she attended school. She also is doing excellent work as a pianist, being one of two chosen from her grade to play the piano in the fifty-piece orchestra at Lincoln Junior High.

THE PRESIDENTIAL RANGE

"Safeguarding the Timberline Trails"

With the erection of ten warning signs at entrances to dangerous trails up the Presidential Range of the White Mountains and the construction of prominent cairns marking the important trails across the Northern and Southern Peaks of the Range, the U. S. Forest Service and the Civilian Conservation Corps have completed vital steps in the safeguarding of the hazardous trails within the White Mountain National Forest.

The caution signs measuring two by three feet bear these words, "This is a fine trail for hiking, but be sure you are in good physical condition (well rested and fed), and have sufficient clothing, emergency feod, and equipment. Travel above timberline is hazardous—climatic changes are sudden and severe at all seasons" These warnings have been placed at the entrances of the popular Tuckerman Ravine Trail up Mount Washington, the Summit Road from the Glen House in Pinkham Notch, the Crawford Path across the Southern Peaks upon which many lives have ben lost, the Edmonds Path up Mount Pleasant, the Valley Way to the Madison Huts from Randolph, the recently completed Daniel Webster Trail which ascends the exposed slopes of Mt. Madison from the Dolly Copp Forest Camp, and other heavy traffic trails.

A total of 27 additional warning signs have been posted at suitable turning points on all hazardous trails with this suggestion, "If the weather is bad, you are advised to turn back and make the ascent at a more favorable time. The route to the summits is treacherous in stormy or foggy weather. Follow closely the cairns." It is hoped that this advice will encourage climbers to return to the protected valleys during stormy weather rather than continue upward above timberline where they are unprotected from the cold winds and driving snow.

Three C. C. C. details of three men each have been quartered all summer at the Lakes of the Clouds and Madison Spring Huts of the Appalachian Mountain Club and at the Mount Washington Summit House. These men have remarked all existing well-traveled routes across exposed portions of the Presidential Range. A total of 37.7 miles of above-treeline trails maintained by the U. S. Forest Service, Appalachian Mountain Club and the Randolph Mountain Club have been recairned. On all important trails such as the Gulfside Trail, Tuckerman Ravine Trail, Tuckerman Crossover, Crawford Path, and Westside Trail the C. C. C. workers have erected at fifty foot intervals three foot piles of stone, supplemented by poles mounted upon conspicuous cairns. These cairns have already proved of considerable assistance to hikers who have encountered early fall storms on the heights. It is hoped that the tragedy of last June 18, in which Simon Joseph lost his way while ascending the Crawford Path and perished upon an unused section of that trail, will not be repeated.

Additional less-traveled routes have been marked with two foot cairns whenever necessary. A total of four thousand cairns have now been constructed upon these trails thus removing one of the greatest handicaps experienced by those following the high trails during rough weather. The need for this extensive remarking of these trails has been generally recognized but not until the Civilian Conservation Corps was created were men and funds available for the important work.

The following New Hampshire C. C. C. enrolled men have been detailed to this work during the past two months: Ernest Arsenault, Gorham; Frank Morris, Exeter, and John Coway, Stark, at the Lakes of the Clouds; Richard Dunton, Gorham; Carl Young, Milo, Me., and William Farnum, Keene, at the Madison Spring Huts, and Emmett Buckley, Berlin; John Tyler, West Milan, and George Jolbert, Berlin, at the Summit House. These men were recruited for this special duty from the 155th and 156th Companies located at Berlin, N. H. and Gilead, Me. Through the generosity of the Appalachian Mountain Club and the management of the Summit House these men have been quartered on the mountains at no expense to the government

Both projects have been closely supervised by officers of the U. S. Forest Service and the Civilian Conservation Corps in order that the most effective means might be employed to safeguard the trails. The actual cairn-building has been carried on by the nine C. C. C. workers during both fair and disagreeable weather. They have also conducted a census of travel upon the various routes in order that the Forest Service may know definitely which trails are the most popular. The C. C. C men have been greatly encouraged in their work by the comments of passing hikers who appreciate the great assurance provided by the rock cairns during foggy and stormy weather.

GOOD WILL

Good will is the greatest asset any Company or individual can have. A Company may have the very best equipment and product it is able to secure, but if it does not possess the good will of the community where it operates, all of its tangible assets avail it nothing and it makes no money.

Good will is an intangible thing. You cannot see it, neither can you place your hands on it, but if you have it, it will sustain you. The amount of business transacted over a period of years is an indication of the good will possessed.

We often read of where a Company when changing hands sells its good will for more than the physical Company is worth.

Good will is secured by fair dealings with the public, the rendering of a proper service, and living the right kind of life.

NEW FORD V-8 for 1934

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

The New Ford V-8 for 1934 is now on display at the showrooms of Ford dealers. Surpassing even the great Ford of 1933 in economy, beauty and comfort, it is truly the car of this modern age—the culmination of thirty years Ford progress. It combines the proved performance of the V-8 cylinder engine with two important new features—Dual Carburetion and perfected Clear-vision Ventilation. See this car today and drive it at the first opportunity.

OUTSTANDING IMPROVEMENTS IN THE NEW FORD V-8

BETTER PERFORMANCE. Greater power, new speed, quicker acceleration, smoother performance, more miles per gallon especially at higher speeds, and quicker starting in cold weather—all these result from the new dual carburetor and dual intake manifold. New waterline thermostats enable the engine to warm up more quickly and to maintain an efficient operating temperature. Added engine refinements reduce oil consumption, further improve operating economy and reduce maintenance costs.

NEW VENTILATION SYSTEM permits clear vision, prevents drafts and provides desired amount of fresh air in any weather. Individual control for front and rear side windows. When ventilation is desired the window glass is raised to the top. Then the handle is given an additional half-turn. This slides the glass back horizontally to form a narrow slot. Through this slot air is drawn out by the forward motion of the car. This simple ventilation system maintains draft-free circulation, insures passenger comfort, prevents fogging windshield in cold or stormy weather. Both windshield and cowl ventilator can be opened to supply additional air needed for comfortable warm-weather driving.

DISTINCTIVE NEW APPEARANCE enhanced by the newly designed chromium-plated radiator shell and grille, new hood louvres, new hub caps. Interiors are attractive, with new tufted upholstery, new mouldings, new cove-type headlining, new instrument panel, new arm rests, new hardware. Swivel-type sun visors in De Luxe bodies prevent glare from front or side.

FENDERS IN COLOR. On De Luxe cars fenders are in color to harmonize with body colors—wheel colors optional. New enamel finish on all bodies and fenders has greater wearing quality and more enduring luster.

GREATER RIDING COMFORT results from increased spring flexibility. The spring leaves are newly designed for quieter and easier action. Shock absorbers are improved. Seat cushions are deeper, with new, softer springs. New type, individual bucket seats provide increased comfort for front-seat passengers in the Tudor Sedan. Adding to comfort is the new driving ease of the 15-to-1 steering gear ratio.

PRICES REMAIN LOW—Tudor Sedan, $535. Coupe, $515. Fordor Sedan, $585. De Luxe Tudor, $575. De Luxe Fordor, $625. De Luxe Coupe (5 windows), $555. De Luxe Coupe (3 windows), $555. De Luxe Roadster, $525. De Luxe Phaeton, $550. Cabriolet, $590. Victoria, $610. (All prices f. o. b. Detroit.)

Mitchellized Psycho-Mystification

From the Wizard of the Switzerland of America—F. E. Mitchell, Alton, N. H.

A letter came to me today from Don Seitz, acknowledging the receipt of an illustrated New Hampshire booklet issued by the State Development Commission. The comment of Mr. Seitz is: "It is very creditable. I once lived in North Conway and tried to run two papers there, so it seemed like a whiff of old times."

Our librarian asked me to read two books, one by Bruce Barton, the other, "The New World of Physical Discovery," by Floyd L. Darrow. Barton, as a writer, reminds me of Little Jack Horner. You know what Jack's specialty was: to sit in the corner and "pull out a plum." Unlike Jesus, of whom he is constantly writing, Barton utters no protest against the world's selfishness and cruelty, makes no suggestion that the money-changers should be driven out. He dwells on the successes of the small minority—successes that are largely the result of fortunate circumstances. Barton is, to me, merely a candy kid; and candy, even of the better kind, should be taken sparingly.

"The New World of Physical Discovery" is of no assistance in my search for happiness; but it should be of interest to those who have a desire to understand Einstein's theory of relativity. There are many interesting scientific conclusions in it. For instance:

"Eddington has recently said that, could we condense the electrons and protons in the atoms comprising the body of an ordinary individual into a perfect solid, the product would be just visible with a microscope."

This scientific discovery explains in part why some of us seem to be so small.

"Neither Newton nor Einstein has fathomed the mystery of gravitation and determined its nature."

"The rather narrow limits of temperature within which life is possible hinge entirely upon a proper regulation of the natural speed ordinances of particles so small that if those in the tiniest drop of water were enlarged to the size of average grains of sand, they would build a roadway from New York to San Francisco one-half mile wide and one foot deep. Thus we see that the issues of life and the multitudinous forms of human activity, for weal or woe, are in the last analysis simple matters of molecular action."

Interesting if true, but of little service to one who needs bread and meat.

I am convinced that, if every act were motivated by a desire to gain a definite object or condition, the power generated would become an irresistable force and a reasonable degree of success would result. We humans, however, lack the power of concentration and the ability to persist; we lose sight of our objective and are sidetracked by unimportant events so frequently that we seldom, if ever, arrive at the desired destination.

Dr. George Crile, of Cleveland, Ohio, has said, "A human body consists of billions of separate living cells, every one of which burns with intense fire. Were each of those cells to yearn with a definite and constant desire, nothing short of destruction could prevent its attainment.

It may all be so, but we don't know. Do you?

WEST PARIS—TRAP CORNER

Death of Leroy F. Everett

Leroy F. Everett, well known cattle dealer, died at his home late Friday night, following an illness of three months. He was born at Norway, May 5, 1851, the son of George W. and Elizabeth Burns Everett.

He was twice married. His first wife was Lucy J. Whittemore. To them were born three children, Floyd, who died at the age of one year, Sadie, who lived but seven months, an infant daughter, who died at birth. He later married Mrs. Jennie Chase Hammond and to this union was born three children, Henry, whose death occurred at the age of three years; Lucy, now Mrs. Lewis Estes, who survives and Roy who died while but an infant. Mrs. Everett died about eight years ago.

Besides the daughter mentioned, he leaves one granddaughter, Irene D. Estes. Funeral services from the home, Tuesday afternoon. Interment at Wayside Cemetery, West Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Stevens and Esther Balentine have moved to their new home on the Snow's Falls road.

TAKING ORDERS FOR REGULAR LIGHT BULBS

Battalion of Salesmen to Canvass

A re-employment campaign, intended to furnish temporary work to approximately 200 men between now and Christmas is being undertaken by Central Maine Power Company it has been announced. Every city and town served by the company will benefit, according to the announcement.

The men have been enrolled in a battalion of salesmen who will canvass the entire Central Maine territory to take orders for the regular bulbs ordinarily sold at company stores.

The entire profits from the sale of these bulbs will be turned over to the salesmen, the company's statement says. Ordinarily, during this period, between 50 and 75 thousand bulbs are purchased from company stores in its annual replacement campaign. This year, by turning the work over to unemployed men it is expected that hundreds of dollars will be earned by the new salesmen.

George S. Williams, Vice President and General Manager of the company, said that while the plan was devised mainly to afford gainful employment it likewise aids the householder to secure their lamps at their door with no added charge for delivery.

The company said that each man employed during this period would be provided with proper identificaton card to show he is authorized to take orders for the lamp bulbs.

Letter of Regret

For Suspension of Democrat—Written to A. E. Forbes by J. M. Bryant, Little Rock, Ark.

Dear Mr. Forbes: It was with profound sorrow that I read the announcement of the suspension of publication of the Democrat, a paper that has made its weekly appearance back farther than my memory reaches and I am in my 89th year. With many others, probably every one of your readers, the earnest hope is expressed that suspension will be only temporary.

Would it not be practicable to continue publication by doubling the subscription price, making it four dollars a year instead of the present price of two dollars? I am confident the great majority of your subscribers would willingly and cheerfully pay the additional two dollars rather than to be deprived of the pleasure of looking into your pleasant face once a week.

The weekly visits will be greatly missed; the Homemakers' Column, the local news, the short stories, general news, the editorials, all will be greatly missed; and though the "Norway Advertiser will be an excellent substitute, it will be like all other substitutes, something less interesting than the original article. The mention of the name "Norway" brings to the writer's mind some of the saddest recollections of his life. A little more than eighty years ago he was a resident of North Norway and during the period of that residence events occurred that have thrown their shadow over his entire life. I believe I am the only living person who really knows the explanation of those events and that they are entirely different from what the generality of those then resident in the neighborhood supposed.

I have gotten far and away from the object I had in writing this letter, which was to give expression to my sorrow for the suspension of the Oxford Democrat. Being the first newspaper within the range of my recollection, it fills a very warm spot in my heart; it is almost like the loss of a favorite child, or perhaps the thought would be more clearly expressed by calling it "the loss of a great-great grandfather.

The depression has indeed brought about many changes in business, political and social circles and the ultimate effect it will have upon our civilization can not yet be determined with any degree of accuracy but that it will be great all are agreed. Many wise statesmen think we are gradually changing from one form of civilzation to another and that in the years to come our surroundings will be far different from those we have been accustomed to see about us.

The NRA has its wings spread over this section as over others and we're all loyal to its principles might accomplish some good; but that it is impossible to abolish Greed, Graft and Selfishness by law, rule or regulation will be accepted by most people as an axiom. Granting that those three characteristics of the human race are principally responsible for the present economical entanglement the entire world is in it will necessarily be seen that something other than rules and regulations will be required to bring about a very much desired improvement in the affairs of mankind. Have we not forgotten God and bent all our energies towards the accumulation of material things and entirely neglected the needs of our spiritual natures?

It is conceded that about 5 per cent of the citizens of the United States own or control, directly or indirectly, about 95 per cent of the wealth of the country. Can we reasonably look for much improvement in conditions as long as that remains true? How to accomplish a more equitable distribution of this wealth is a puzzling question. An increase in wages and decrease in profits will aid; some system of taxation may be brought forward that will aid also; but years will be required to settle the question satisfactorily. That it will be settled in a satisfactory manner and justice and equity satisfied, I confidently believe. Sometimes I am glad that I am nearing the end of life's journey and shall escape the perplexing troubles that can not be avoided while these various movements are occurring, the complete accomplishment of which may occupy many years as the movements must of necessity be progressive.

Rather a long letter to express my sympathy for the unfortunate suspension of the Oxford Democrat, but when an old man undertakes to say anything he requires more words to express his ideas than a young man would.

Mrs. Della Maxim entertained the Good Cheer Society of the Universalist Church at her home, Wednesday afternoon.

BUCKFIELD

Sixtieth Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Harlow quietly observed their sixtieth wedding anniversary on the 7th. of December at the home of their daughter, Mrs. David Goff at New Sharon.

They lived for many years in Buckfield where both are honorary members of Mountain Grange. Mr. Harlow was one of 13 who composed the pioneer class at the University of Maine. There were nine children of this union: Mrs. Flora Rawson of Portsmouth, N. H.; Mrs. Daisy Merrill of Manchester, N. H.; Mrs. E. L. Phinny, Buckfield; Percy W. of Mechanic Falls; Miss Fannie Harlow of Winthrop, Mass.; Harry A. of Auburndale, Mass.; Earl Harlow, Mrs. Beryle Goff of this town; and the tenor singer, Leon J. Harlow of Mechanic Falls. All are living with the exception of Earl.

Harley Rawson, who has been boarding at Hotel Long will go to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ricker.

Gordan and Jeanette Gould spent Saturday with Rodney Pearson at Pearson's Camp.

Mr. and Mrs. Vinton Keene and two children, Jean and Edward left Saturday morning for Florida where they will spend the winter.

Al Haskell has moved into the rent over the First National Store for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Damon of Sumner spent Thursday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Everett Pearson at their camp.

Paul Turner and Silver Rowe of West Buckfield called on Mr. and Mrs. Everett Pearson.

Saturday Night Blaze

Maxim Block Damaged by Fire

Fire in partitions at the Maxim Block opposite the Advertiser office caused damage of about $300 Saturday. Smoke pouring from lower windows was the first indication of trouble and a general alarm was sounded from Box 28 at Beal's Tavern corner at 7:20 in the evening.

Four pieces of apparatus responded and two lines were ready before the whistle ceased blowing. Altogether, 1100 feet of hose was laid with two extra lines ready for any emergency.

Two holes were chopped through the outside wall of the main building and the blaze was soon extinguished. An examination showed the fire started in the basement around a water pipe which had been thawed out with a torch earlier that day. It is believed a spark smoldered in the timbers, then spread upward through partitions to the second floor.

Smoke filled the rooms, including Rowe's barber shop and a number of apartments and storage space but damage from the source and from water was slight.

The building is the former C. B. Cummings furniture store, later used for a armory by Co. C, 103rd Inf. Albert Maxim of South Paris, the present owner, made extensive alterations about two years ago and has a string of buildings occupying the Main St. corner at Winman Street.

Pleaded Guilty to Arson

Thomas S. Hall of North Fryeburg Bound Over to March Term

Thomas S. Hall, 50, of North Fryeburg pleaded guilty to setting fire to the buildings at North Fryeburg and at Fryeburg Harbor. The hearing was Thursday morning in Norway Municipal Court following an alleged confession made to Sheriff W. O. Frothingham, Deputy Joel J. Flynn and County Attorney Matthew McCarthy, on Wednesday. Respondent was bound over to the March term of Superior Court at Rumford and bail fixed at $1,000.

The fires that Hall allegedly confessed to setting razed his home farm buildings at North Fryeburg and one set at the Harbor he had rented to a family in September 30. They were a little over a mile apart and the buildings were burned within two hours of each other.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Entertained Classmates

Miriam Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Brown, entertained a group of her classmates at her home at North Norway Center, in honor of her fourteenth birthday, Wednesday evening, Dec. 13. The dining room was decorated with small Christmas trees and red lights. Games and music furnished entertainment and refreshments of ice cream and cakes were served.

The young hostess received many nice gifts. Those present were Natalie Goodwin, Eleanor Aldrich, Elaine Bailey, Lois Hunton, Arline Woodworth, Wilma Thomas, David Greenlaw, Keith Calef, Wesley Lasselle, Alfred Wiles, Leonard Gillan, Robert Emerson and Sherman Sanborn.
